Convention Ratifies Agnew Despite Attempted Rebellion

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The Republican National Convention ratified Richard M. Nixon's choice of a vice presidential running mate Thursday night, nominating Maryland Gov. Spiro T. Agnew despite an attempted rebellion.

Michigan Gov. George Romney was put up as a rival to Nixon's man as a liberal dissent surfaced on a turbulent convention floor.

But the dissidents didn't have the votes.

And before the roll call vote was completed, Romney stood to move that the Agnew nomination be made unanimous. A chorus of ayes, with but a scattering of audible dissent, made that official.

"Gov. Agnew is unanimously the nominee of the Republican Party in 1968 for Vice President," proclaimed Rep. Gerald R. Ford of Michigan, the convention chairman.

At the time Romney made his motion the tabulation of votes stood at 1,128 votes for Agnew — far more than the 667 majority.

"We will go home to Michigan and we will do the best we can to achieve national, state and local Republican victories this fall," Romney said.

The uprising produced the first real excitement of the convention, but the futility of the uprising was plain from the start.

And the convention returned quickly to its script. That meant doing what Nixon wanted done.

Sen. Jack Miller of Iowa said he would put the name of New York Mayor John V. Lindsay in nomination, but he never did.

Romney didn't hide the fact that he would have relished the second spot. Asked about a Nixon spokesman's statement that he had indicated he was not interested, the Michigan governor said:

"I don't know what that could possibly be based on. I had no contact with the Nixon people."

"I haven't started this thing," Romney said. "The Michigan delegation hasn't started this thing."

"We don't know who started this thing."

"I don't know what I'm going to do," Romney said.

Gov. Raymond P. Shafer of Pennsylvania said his delegation had been released to vote its wishes in the startling vice presidential scrap.

Pennsylvania Delegation Split in Vote for Agnew

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Pennsylvania's 64-member delegation split Thursday night in the vote which nominated Maryland Gov. Spiro T. Agnew as the Republican vice presidential nominee.

Culminating a day of intra-mural bickering between the young and old elements of the state GOP, the Pennsylvania tally after several checks and rechecks read: Agnew — 30; Michigan Gov. George Romney — 24 and New York Mayor John Lindsay, who never was officially nominated, 10.

The drive against Agnew, Richard M. Nixon's choice as his running mate, had the backing of such younger party figures as Rep. Richard S. Schweiker, county chairman

Andrew Lewis of Montgomery County; Dauphin County chairman Robert Smith, and Philadelphia Dist. Atty. Arlen Specter.

"We need someone who can communicate with the cities," said one of the insurgents in reflecting a common complaint heard throughout the day against Agnew.

Gov. Shafer, in keeping with his earlier pronouncements, voted for Agnew. However, former Gov. William W. Scranton and U. S. Sen. Hugh Scott cast their votes for Romney.

"I think the main problem with this ticket is winning in November," Scranton said during a flurry of activity on the floor. "I don't want to say any more except that I think Gov. Romney can do better for us in the cities."

Earlier, Shafer said he would respect and support Nixon's selection of Agnew as his running mate, but state chairman John C. Jordan conceded many of the Pennsylvania delegation were not happy with it.

For awhile, it appeared that the threatened rebellion would dissipate, but the movement picked up some steam when support was forthcoming from other states.

Explosion Rips Refinery; 15 Workmen Are Injured

MARCUS HOOK, Pa. (AP) — An explosion and fire, ignited by fumes escaping from a gasoline storage tank, ripped the Sun Oil Co. refinery here Thursday. Fifteen workmen were injured, four of them hospitalized.

Witnesses said a huge ball of fire cut a swath of destruction for 200 feet before it rolled up the side of a 40-foot-high gasoline storage tank and ignited its contents.

Eight of the burned workers were taken to hospitals for treatment. The other seven were less seriously burned and required minor treatment in the refinery's dispensary.

A spokesman for Sun Oil reported that escaping fumes were responsible for the blast.

Nicholas Borsello, 58, Marcus Hook, Del., and John R. Weir, 18, West Chester, both Sun Oil employees, and Thomas Simunov, Woodlyn, employed by a Philadelphia paint contractor, were hospitalized and under intensive care, the spokesman said.

Donald Ray, of Philadelphia, also a worker for the paint contractor, and Joel Mosley, 63, Twin Oaks, a construction company employee, were under observation at hospitals. Richard Haislip, 55, Chester, was treated for burns at a hospital and released.

The spokesman said the fire did "considerable damage" to 16 private passenger cars, a tank wagon, a truck trailer and four light trucks parked near the blaze.

He said the fire was extinguished at 2 p.m. by the company's fire unit and volunteer firemen.

The tank, approximately 50 feet high and 120 feet in diameter, had a capacity of 90,000 barrels of gasoline, the spokesman said.

Restrictions At Post Office Rescinded

Effective immediately, anticipated restrictions upon postal services from the Warren post office have been rescinded, according to a release from Postmaster Frank A. Fago.

Window service will be maintained on Saturdays from 8 a.m. until 12 noon. Additionally, regular Saturday deliveries and mail collections will continue to be offered.

Nixon Pledges Honorable End To War in Vietnam

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Richard M. Nixon Thursday night accepted his second presidential nomination, telling the happy Republican delegates, "This time we're going to win!"

The delegates cheered for five minutes before letting Nixon begin his speech.

"We're going to win," Nixon told them, because the nation is divided and is crying out for the kind of leadership the Republicans can provide.

He lauded his running mate, Gov. Spiro T. Agnew of Maryland, and extended congratulations to all the defeated nominees for the battle they put up, but declared that the party had emerged in unity.

"I know you're going to fight harder for the victory we must win in November because we're going to be together in that campaign," Nixon promised.

"When a nation as great as America is bogged down in a war like that in Vietnam, crime is rampant and the President of the United States cannot travel abroad or in our cities without fear of violence, then it is time for new leadership in the United States."

"Tonight I accept the challenge and the commitment to bring that new leadership," he said, inviting the delegates to join him and "Find the truth, and live the truth and seek the truth."

"I do not promise the millennium in the morning," Nixon said.

"But I do promise action."

Calling for "new leadership not tied to the mistakes of the past," Nixon said "The first priority of this administration will be to bring an honorable end to the war in Vietnam."

Nixon said all U.S. foreign commitments of the past 21 years must be reviewed in the light of the world today.

There are 200 million Americans and there are 2 billion others in the world, he said.

"I say the time has come for othersto bear their share of the burden," Nixon said, getting a great ovation from the delegates.

Hardly a day passes, he said, but there is an insult to the American flag somewhere in the world. The ultimate insult came with the seizure by North

Agnew Hopes to Have Great Responsibility

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Gov. Spiro T. Agnew of Maryland accepted the Republican vice presidential nomination Thursday with a pledge to press a strong fight to bring the Republican Party into leadership.

Before stepping to the podium, at which he nominated Richard M. Nixon Wednesday night, Agnew had to weather a small rebellion against his choice as Nixon's running mate.

Agnew looked solid and self-assured despite his protestation that the nomination caught him by surprise and, "I had no time to prepare a profound message."

He rejected what he called the popular view "that the only proper purpose of government is to spend money."

"I look forward to sharing in an administration in which a president will entrust to his vice president great responsibility for the problems of the states and the cities," said Agnew.

"I have a strong feeling that the needed changes will be made and that the Nixon administration will make them."

Agnew said the government must function more effectively in meeting the problems of our cities.

"We must . . . make black Americans partners in our system," he said.

He promised a hard campaign from now to November.

"I fully recognize that I am an unknown quantity to many of you," he said.

Agnew promised the delegates he would contribute his entire efforts to the purpose "that we all endorse, that we all aspire to — a completely Republican dominated family, county, state, city and federal government in November."

National Guard Turns Miami Into 'Occupied Territory'

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Screaming Negroes went on a rampage of burning and looting in Liberty City Thursday and fought two gunbattles with police before National Guard troops made the area "occupied territory."

Two Negroes, a sniper and a passerby, were killed.

Two Negro women were shot, police said, and at least seven persons required hospital treatment, some for bullet wounds.

Some 50 persons were arrested for curfew violation and charges of disorderly conduct leading to rioting.

The disturbance was in a predominantly Negro northwest Miami area just 10 miles from where the Republicans were holding their nominating convention in Miami Beach, across Biscayne Bay.

Police Lt. Jay Golden said one of the shooting victims was killed as he walked into a cross-fire between police and snipers at 13th Avenue and 62nd Street, where a sniper later was killed.

Neither victim was immediately identified.

Golden said he had no confirmed reports of policemen being shot but several were given first aid for cuts and bruises.

The riot area covered several blocks, but a section Golden said was "two miles by four miles" was sealed off to whites and a 6 p.m. curfew was instituted.

A 500-man detachment of National Guard troops was mobilized and soldiers wearing gas masks and armed with bayonetted rifles marched through the streets. They were accompanied by two armored personnel carriers and heavily armed police.

"They're treating it as occupied territory," Golden said.

Gov. Claude Kirk, who made several televised appeals for peace, said at mid-evening the area was under control.

"We answered a disturbance with a show of force to avoid a riot and to protect the people," said Kirk. He earlier said on television that violence would be met with violence.

People in the riot area who wouldn't comply immediately with police orders were arrested promptly.

One old Negro man sitting on his porch refused to go inside his house. A trooper hit him with a rifle butt, knocking the man down.

The man's wife toppled over, crying hysterically, and a little girl who appeared to be about 6 years old, grabbed the arm of a

Allies Seek Material Amassed for Offensive

SAIGON (AP) — Allied troops plunged deeper into the A Shau Valley Thursday looking for war material believed amassed for what the enemy calls its forthcoming "final, definitive general offensive."

The valley 27 miles southwest of the old imperial capital of Hue in the north is thought to be one of the enemy's most important bases in South Vietnam. But first reports indicate the yields of weapons and supplies so far have been disappointing.

Ferried in by 200 helicopters beginning Sunday, 3,000 soldiers of the U.S. 101st Air Cavalry Division and the Vietnamese 1st Infantry Division have made only light contact with the North Vietnamese and killed 15 of them in the first four days of the operation.

B52 eight-engine bombers have been swarming over the valley and plastering suspected storage areas for day.

It was the appearance of the B52s that may have caused the bulk of the North Vietnamese to pull back into neighboring Laos, U.S. officers say air reconnaissance had shown the North Vietnamese had returned in force since the last allied drive through the valley in April and May. Heavy aircraft fire from the valley downed two helicopters and an F100 Supersaber last Friday.

In the sporadic fighting, 2 U.S. soldiers have been killed and 22 wounded. South Vietnamese losses were 8 killed and 18 wounded. Some of the casualties were incurred the first day when enemy antiaircraft fire brought down a helicopter that crashed and burned, killing one crewman and injuring two others. Two other helicopters were so badly damaged by enemy fire they were forced to land.

A U.S. spokesman said this second invasion of the valley is a spoiling attack to cut the enemy supply lines and "do what other damage we can before the monsoons begin this fall."

Trucks from North Vietnam drive down the Ho Chi Minh trail through Laos into the valley, which extends for 25 miles along the Laotian border. The valley is the gateway to Hue and to Da Nang, the big U.S. military complex 64 miles to the southwest.

U.S. officers expect Hue and Da Nang, along with Saigon, to be targets when the enemy offensive comes, possibly later this month or in September.

Motorcycle Fatalities in Pa. Growing at Alarming Rate

HARRISBURG (AP) — The Bureau of Traffic Safety reported Thursday that motorcycle fatalities are increasing in Pennsylvania at an alarming rate.

Preliminary figures for the first six months of this year show that 50 motorcyclists were killed, compared with 42 for the same period of 1967.

The contract calls for wage increases of 21 cents an hour retroactive for a year and 18 more cents from October of this year through Sept. 30, 1969. The unions had sought a 75 cent-an-hour increase.

Harry R. Brainerd, bureau commissioner, further noted that 23 motorcyclists were killed last August alone and that the final

Nixon

Korea of an American warship on the high seas. This was an allusion to the USS Pueblo.

When that can happen, Nixon declared, "it is time for new leadership in America." Again the crowd went wild, with rhythmic stamping and cries of, "We want Nixon."

"Let us always respect, as I do, our courts," said Nixon, "but let us also recognize if our courts have gone too far in weakening law enforcement."

"The first civil right of every American is to be free from domestic violence and that right must be restored," he said.

He called for increased national wealth to care for the ill and elderly, but for the able-bodied, he said the answer is "not more millions on welfare rolls but more millions on payrolls."

"Let us build bridges against that gulf that separates black America from white America," he said.

Black Americans, he said, want "a piece of the action in private enterprise."

"We shall have new programs that provide that equal chance," he promised.

For the nation's 200th birthday — July 4, 1976 — he predicted a day that would mark:

— Respect for the President.
— Respect for the flag.

— The opportunity for every child to have a chance to go as high as he wants.

— Solutions for pollution and other urban problems.

— Firm backing for the dollar.

"A long dark night for America is about to end," Nixon solemnly declared.

"The time has come for us to leave the valley of despair and climb the mountain so we can see the glory of the dawn and peace and freedom in the world."

Schmidt was on a training flight from the Niagara Falls Air Base.

His helicopter landed on property of Norbert A. Schulz.

Four Escape Serious Injury In Mishap

Four persons escaped serious injury in a two car crash on Conewango ave., just north of Division st. Thursday.

The accident occurred at 5:17 p.m., according to borough police, when a car operated by Robert Edwin Seagist, 15 Plum st., crashed into the right side of a car operated by David Paul Atkins, 503 Jackson Run rd.

Seagist was traveling west on Division st., police reported, when his brakes failed. Unable to stop for the traffic sign at the intersection of Conewango ave., Seagist traveled through the intersection, attempted to turn right on Conewango ave., and in the attempt struck the Atkins car. One of two passengers in the Atkins car, Vickie Atkins, complained of an injured knee, police stated, however no treatment was required.

Damage to each vehicle was set at $150, according to police.

Johnson Discloses Intestinal Disorder

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — President Johnson disclosed Thursday he has an intestinal disorder — he called it diverticulitis — but his doctor didn't — that will require his return to an Army hospital for more tests next week.

But the President said he is feeling "excellent."

His physician, Vice Adm. George G. Burkley, said the ailment is a sort of protrusion of the wall of the large intestine — what he termed "out pouchings." There was no indication immediately of what form of treatment is required or whether any surgery might be needed.

But Burkley said Johnson does not have diverticulitis, a condition involving inflammation. Diverticulitis sometimes can be helped by diet and sometimes requires an operation.

Apparently Johnson's present condition dates back at least to 1960 and there was no immediate explanation of why it was being disclosed Thursday for the first time.

Burkley said the annual physical checkups since 1960 had shown the existence of the protrusions, or, in medical terminology, diverticula.

Although there must be some reason at this time for a measure of concern, Burkley said the President is in no discomfort and no inflammation has been detected.

He said the protrusions of the colon wall are not uncommon and ordinarily not considered serious for someone in Johnson's age group. The President will be 60 Aug. 27.

The President and Mrs. Johnson both entered Brooke Army Medical Center here Tuesday for annual physical checkups. While Mrs. Johnson stayed on, the President went back to the LBJ ranch 75 miles to the north, on Tuesday and flew back by helicopter Thursday.

County Public Assistance Costs $40.09 Per Person

(TMO Harrisburg Bureau)

HARRISBURG — Expenditures for public assistance in Warren County rounded out to $40.09 per inhabitant during the past fiscal year — considerably above the statewide average of $30.30, a report by the State Department of Public Welfare indicated yesterday.

In the overall picture, total relief expenditures for Warren countians during the year amounted to $2,012,516, broken down into these three prime categories: public assistance grants — $360,238; medical and burial expenditures — $1,596,798, and administration and "other services" — $55,480.

Moving away from the cost, or expenditure, factor, Warren County during the year was credited with a monthly average of 510 county residents receiving public assistance (cash grants) — representing 1.0 percent of the county population (against the statewide average of 3.2 percent).

What type of relief were these residents of the county receiving on the average each month?

The department report shows an average monthly count of 184 Warren countians receiving old age assistance, 57 receiving blind pensions, 219 aid-to-dependent-children assistance, 14 general assistance, and 36 coming under the aid-to-disabled program.

As a point of comparison, the public relief program in Pennsylvania has remained fairly consistent during the past quarter-century, hovering between a low of 2.0 percent of the population (1945 and 1954) to a high of 3.9 percent (1950 and 1963).

(Peak year on the relief front since the program got under way in Pennsylvania in 1932 was 16.2 percent of the population — back in 1935 when the number of reliefers reached 1,587,796.)

Shafer Urged To Reconvene Assembly

CHAMBERSBURG, Pa. (AP) — Gov. Shafer was urged Thursday night to reconvene the general assembly before Sept. 1 to allow consideration of legislation that would prevent imposition of penalties against Scranton and Pittsburgh school teachers.

The urging came from the Pennsylvania State Education Association (PSEA), which also sent copies of a telegram to legislative leaders. The PSEA is holding its annual workshop for local presidents and officers here.

Teachers in those two cities are subject to penalties under a state law that prohibits strikes by public employees. The Scranton teachers struck last December, the Pittsburgh teachers last March.

The proposed legislation would amend the 1947 law to waive the penalty clauses. Under the current law, the Scranton and Pittsburgh teachers who struck could lose tenure; be denied salary increases for three years, and could not be rehired with a salary above that which they made before the strike.

The latter penalty would wipe out pay raises won in both cities. The amendments passed the House July 8 by a 178-13 vote, and were before the Senate when Gov. Shafer said he would veto the legislation. The assembly recessed before further action was taken.

Miners' Bodies Are Recovered

GREENVILLE, Ky. (AP) — The bodies of nine coal miners, trapped by an explosion, were recovered Thursday from an underground shaft where rescue teams had spent nearly 18 hours in a frantic search for them.

The blast, believed triggered by a carload of explosives, blew several other men out of the mine entrance and crumbled two concrete walls which controlled the flow of air.

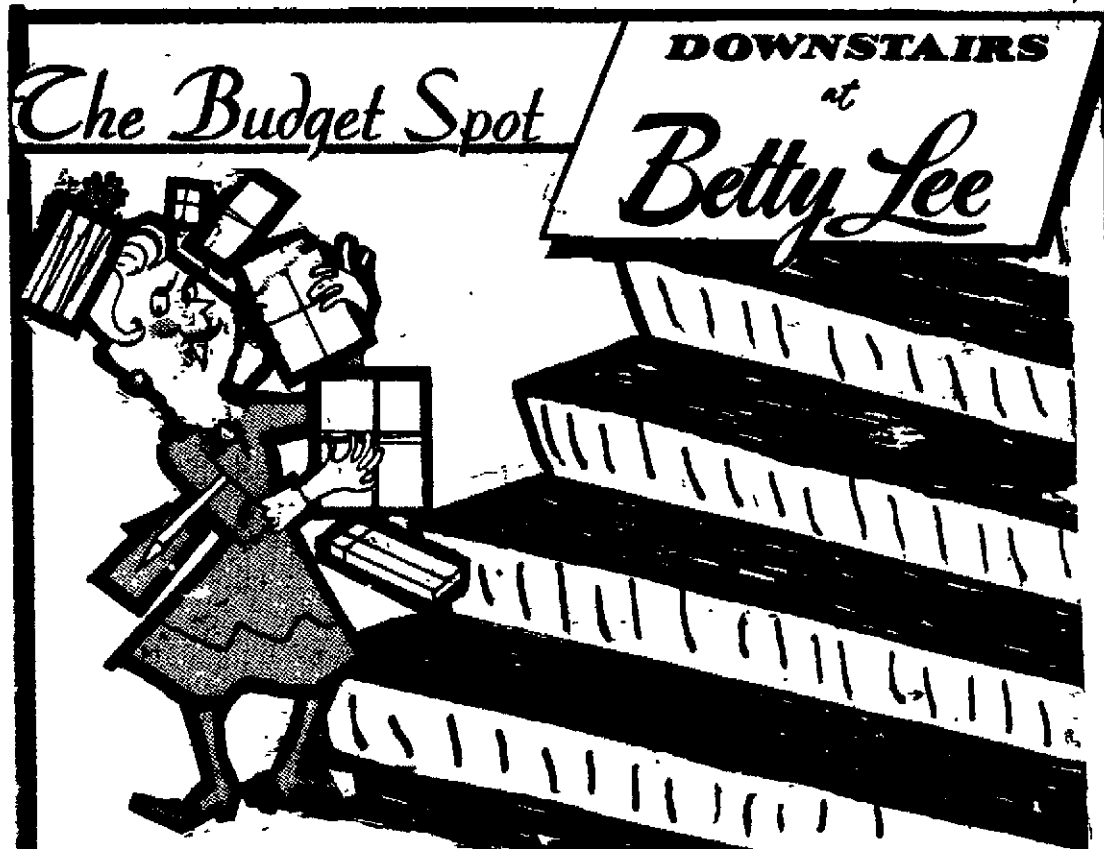

"It struck like a whirlwind," recalled one miner after Wednesday's accident at the River Queen plant. "I almost followed those poor guys into that doomed passage."

The miner, who declined identification, said he was knocked flat but "managed to get out by feeling my way in the dark."

The mine, owned and operated by the Peabody Coal Co., was sealed off later by the state Department of Mines and Minerals, pending an investigation. In Washington, the U.S. Bureau of Mines disclosed that a preliminary report indicated the blast came from explosives being transported deep in the mine.

Until Abraham Lincoln put Thanksgiving in November in 1863, it had showed up in eight different months.

McCarthy Praises GOP Choice But Predicts Democrat Victory

(C) N. Y. Times News Service WASHINGTON—Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy has praised Thursday for the selection of Richard M. Nixon as the Republican nominee for president.

"I think the choice of Nixon is a proper choice," he said at a brief news conference. "He is truly a Republican candidate."

Earlier, when two reporters called on McCarthy in his dark-walled Senate office, they found him in a relaxed mood after a day of strenuous campaigning in Columbus and Cleveland, Ohio. On his desk were copies of "Poems" by George Seferis, the Greek poet, Robert Lowell's "Near the Ocean," T.S. Eliot's "The Wasteland," and Robert Bly's "The Light Around the Body."

The senator had arrived home in time to watch on television some of the nominating speeches and demonstrations in Miami Beach. He said he was giving some thought to an innovation when his turn came in Chicago, some two weeks hence.

"What," he asked, "would you think of something along the line of a Greek chorus for the nominating speech?"

"You mean," one of his visitors asked, "Strophe and Antistrophe—with the Strophe saying 'A Man Who' and the Antistrophe saying...?"

"That's right," McCarthy interrupted, smiling as he relished the scene.

The senator was asked what he thought about the Nixon nomination. He thought it was fitting.

"He represents pretty much what they (the Republicans) stand for," he said, "what their position is on the Vietnam war and what their position is on domestic problems. There is something to be said for consistency."

McCarthy said he did not know very much about Spiro T. Agnew, the governor of Maryland, but he was "rather surprised" that Nixon had chosen him as his running mate.

"I thought he'd pick Steve Derounian," he said. (Steven B. Derounian, former United States representative from Nassau County, N.Y., and a staunch supporter of Barry M. Goldwater, was defeated in the Goldwater debacle of 1964.)

On the basis of the polls, McCarthy expressed confidence that he could beat Nixon. It was "not as certain" that Vice President Humphrey could, he said.

The senator was asked whether he thought Nixon, long regarded as a hawk on Vietnam, had undergone "a transformation."

"Not really a transformation," he replied. "He explores it more vigorously than he did. But his position hasn't changed very much."

The same was true, he continued, of Nixon's position on the problems of the cities. Nixon, he said, advocated that something be done but "he never put a price tag on it like Rockefeller who said he was prepared to spend $150 billion over 10 years."

Later, in his formal news conference, the Minnesotan was asked whether he thought Democrats would follow the example of the Republicans and nominate a man favored by "the old pros."

McCarthy said he did not know, but his situation was quite different from Governor Rockefeller's.

Rockefeller, he explained, "came in on very different terms," from himself; he did not enter primary contests, for example, nor "develop any new kind of support in the Republican party."

"He didn't involve himself in new politics but in non-politics," McCarthy said.

The senator said he did not know whether he would campaign for Vice President Humphrey if he were nominated. "It depends on what happens along the way," he added.

He has steadily taken the position that he could support Humphrey only if the vice president shifted his position on Vietnam.

In Columbus, Patrick J. Lucey, former Wisconsin lieutenant governor and a leading supporter of the late Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, said at a news conference called to announce his endorsement of McCarthy that he thought Humphrey would welcome a strong plank in the platform "as a way of liberating himself from his past position."

OEO Office Names Supervisor For Training Project

Laddie L. Neel has been selected by the Warren-Forest Counties Economic Opportunity Council, Inc., as supervisor for Project TOP. Announcement of the selection of Neel, who has had many years experience in the attendant field at Warren State Hospital, was made by Richard M. Brown, executive director of the Council.

Brown stated that Project TOP (Training Older Persons) has been funded by the Office of Economic Opportunity for seven months and is designed to provide the basic training necessary to qualify 40 persons for employment as attendants at Warren State Hospital.

Recruitment of the potential trainees is being done by the Community Action Agencies serving in each of these counties. Persons ranging in age from 22 to 60 will be accepted for this training, with preference being given to those 35 or more years of age.

Those who successfully complete the course will be offered employment at Warren State Hospital. Since some of these persons may be used to staff the new geriatrics complex, it is hoped that a majority of the applicants will be men.

The trainees will receive 24 weeks of instruction which will include 150 hours of instruction designed for hospital attendants, remedial education leading to a high school equivalency diploma, and actual on-the-job experience as a hospital attendant.

Persons interested in applying for this training may contact Neel at Warren State Hospital (phone 723-5500) or by contacting the Warren-Forest Counties Economic Opportunity Council, Inc., at 225 Pennsylvania ave., W., Warren, Pa. (phone 723-1712).

Warren Borough Firemen Respond to Three Alarms

Warren borough firemen responded to three alarms Thursday, however, according to a department spokesman, no serious damages resulted.

At 9:39 a.m., firemen rushed to the corner of Fourth and East streets where a car was reportedly on fire. Firemen stated, however, when they arrived at the scene it was discovered that a heater hose on the car owned by Josephine Knoll had broken and was steaming. There was no fire. Firemen returned to headquarters at 9:46 a.m.

At 1:47 they were called to the service station located at the corners of Laurel st. and Pennsylvania ave., where a shed at the rear of the station was on fire. The cause of the fire was not determined, a department spokesman stated, but the building which burned reportedly contained a quantity of rubbish. No estimate of damage was reported. Firemen returned to headquarters at 2:04 p.m.

The third alarm sounded while the emergency truck was still at the scene of the service station fire at 1:55 p.m., firemen stated. Engine one was dispatched to 211 Liberty st., where a car owned by Charles Carlson, Jamestown, N.Y., was leaking gas. Firemen flushed the gasoline from the pavement and returned to headquarters at 2:05 p.m.

LAW STUDY URGED

CHICAGO (AP) — Fundamentals of law should be taught to grade school children, says Chicago's top crime fighter.

Charles Siragusa, executive director of the Illinois Crime Investigating Commission, said many educators are unwittingly helping bosses of organized crime form "the cadre for future mob operations."

He said they fail to teach children crime law because they are unfamiliar with it. "Perhaps the vacuum exists because teachers, themselves, are ill-equipped to impart such knowledge to their students," he said.

He suggests a "nation-wide emulation" of a program now in effect in Chicago public schools which stresses the importance of law in an orderly society.

Humphrey Delighted By Results

(C) N.Y. Times News Service WAVERLY, Minn. — Vice President Humphrey said Thursday the country would have a "clear choice" in November's presidential election if he were chosen by the Democrats to oppose Richard M. Nixon.

He also gave his first hint of a possible line of attack on the Republican ticket chosen this week in Miami Beach. Speaking of Nixon's selection of Governor Spiro Agnew of Maryland as a running mate, he said:

"I have a feeling the choice represented a rather significant compromise. Mr. Nixon had a great deal of support from the South. Maryland is a border state, and I imagine the choice of Mr. Agnew was related to some of the problems in the Republican party."

The vice president was barely able to conceal his pleasure of the prospect of running against Nixon and Agnew.

"We now have a Republican ticket we can go to the mat with," he said.

He refused to discuss his own possible choice of a running mate, if he wins the Democratic presidential nomination.

Humphrey met newsmen on the lawn of his lakeside home here a few minutes after the announcement that Nixon had picked Agnew.

Dressed in a sport coat and turtle neck shirt and chatting informally, he acknowledged that the Agnew choice had surprised him.

He offered friendly words for both Nixon, whom he called "a capable campaigner," and Agnew, who, he said, was "a competent public official."

He said he had telephoned Nixon to congratulate him after hearing the news of his nomination from the radio.

He said their telephone visit had been cordial and friendly — "a good way, I believe, to start a very intensive and interesting campaign here."

Speaking more formally in front of television cameras, Humphrey said he knew Nixon's public record and the record of the Republican party.

"I believe that in this election," he said, "if I am permitted to have the nomination by the Democratic convention, the American people will have a clear choice, not only between men but also politics of government and the role of this nation in the affairs of the world."

"I look forward to the campaign because both of us are equipped by background and knowledge of the issues to carry on, I believe, an effective and informed, intelligent campaign to the American people."

He expressed confidence that he could defeat Nixon.

A Vital Bridge

For tens of millions of the nation's youngsters, the official closing of summer will soon be signaled by the ringing of the first school bell. In days past, when a majority of our people lived in rural areas and scattered small towns, that bell often rang in the typical one room schoolhouse calling youngsters from the dusty lanes, the fields, the swimming holes where they worked and played, learned and grew during the days of summer. Answering its call, they came to resume, often with considerable reluctance, the regimentation of school hours and the traditional pursuit of at least a passing proficiency in the three R's.

For most people an education was something you got through—"when you were a kid" so that you could get about the business of making your way in the world.

The school bells of today carry a far different message and chal-

SYLVIA PORTER

Bye-Bye Balanced Budget

"Except in times of war or economic adversity, expenditures should be covered by revenues. We must work persistently to reduce... the national debt." Republican platform, 1960.

"We pledge an end to chronic deficit financing, proudly reaffirming our belief in a balanced budget. (We pledge) further reduction in individual and corporation tax rates as fiscal discipline is restored." Republican platform, 1964.

"By responsibly applying Federal expenditures to the needs of the country, we can live both within our means and up to our aspirations. Such funds as become available with the termination of the Vietnam War... will be applied in a balanced way to critical domestic needs and to reduce the heavy tax burden." Republican platform, 1968.

Just before the GOP convention opened in Miami Beach this week, the Democratic administration in Washington had to disclose the fact that the Federal budget deficit in the 1968 fiscal year reached a horrendous $25.4 billion, by far the most massive splash of red ink since the World War II years of 1943-45.

The Democrats also had to disclose that to cover this deficit, the Federal Government was forced to borrow $23.1 billion from the public — thereby helping to send borrowing costs spiraling upward to the highest levels in a century.

The coincidence of these grim disclosures in Washington and the Republican convention in Miami was an open invitation to the GOP platform writers to make political hay, by denouncing the fiscal sin of budget deficits and embracing the fiscal purity of annually balanced budgets.

But what did the platform writers do instead? They didn't even mention a "balanced budget!" This, I believe, represents the first time in the history of our country that a political platform has failed to pay at least lip service to the virtues of balancing the budget, and the omission, mind you, has come first in the Republican (translating: more conservative) platform.

Cast your eye again over the quotes above and you'll see how dramatic has been the shift in just eight years.

As recently as 1960, the plank on which candidate Richard Nixon campaigned paid homage to a balance between Federal income and outgo, except in grave emergencies.

This was in keeping with traditional Republican financial thinking, and even though Nixon probably didn't believe this any more than his Democratic opponent John F. Kennedy did, both candidates felt it essential to go through the ritual of pretending that they did.

In 1964, the GOP budget plank caught up with mid-20th century economic thinking. The platform reaffirmed belief in a "balanced budget," but most significantly, it didn't specify "when." This marked the fundamental break with the concept of a budget arbitrarily balanced every 12 months.

Now, despite the dreadful accumulation of deficits in recent years, note what the Republican platform says and doesn't say. In simplest language, here is the basic position both parties have embraced.

(1) A balanced budget is a prudent goal over a period of time, but not necessarily over a rigid period of a calendar year.

(2) Persistent deficits, of the 1967-68 magnitude particularly, are engines of inflation and profoundly threaten the dollar. Such deficits MUST be brought under control.

(3) A budget surplus is highly desirable when there is a clear danger of inflation because this means the Federal Government will then be withdrawing funds on balance from the economic stream and helping to curb price-wage rises.

(4) A budget deficit is equally desirable when the economy is sluggish because this means the Federal Government will then be pumping funds on balance into the economic stream and helping to stimulate business activity.

Informed economists — on the right and left — have long accepted these four concepts.

And in Miami this week, the Republican platform writers grabbed the lead and went beyond them to an extraordinarily high level of economic statesmanship.

One Down and One to Go

HARRISBURG — Columnist's Notebook.

THE CONVENTION SEASON—One down and one to go is the way the score stands at the moment on the presidential nominating convention front but two lawmakers (each of opposing political faith) on Capitol Hill this week on constituent business offered some interesting thoughts as they lunched together in the Capitol Cafeteria.

Quoth the Republican veteran of the legislative wars:

"Well, now that our's is over and we have a ticket, I think we can look forward to losing our shirts in the fall. Looks as though you Democrats are in for another round in Washington, to say nothing of possibly right here on our own legislative front."

Quoth the not-so-veteran Democratic lawmaker:

"I wouldn't say that. I think we're destined to lose this year no matter who we put up. This just isn't going to be our year. Look at all the trouble we've run into so far. First there was the communications strike that almost knocked us out of Chicago. Now there's talk about a taxicab strike out there just before our convention is due to start. It's a portent of things to come for we Democrats."

(At which point this writer, caught in the crossfire over his soup, suggested that perhaps each would do well to exchange party affiliation.)

PENNSYLVANIA HIGHER EDUCATION — Any idea how many students were enrolled in the field of higher education in the Keystone State during the past school year?

According to the State Department of Public Instruction, Pennsylvania's higher education mill had 349,705 students—245,125 of whom were full-time and 104,580 part-time.

Broken down by type of institution, the "state-related" universities in the state had an enrollment of 104,512, of which number 59,949 were full-time students, but the biggest single bloc of students enrollment was found in the non-state-added (private) college and university group with total enrollment of 130,656 (97,483 full-time).

Enrollment in the fourteen state-owned state colleges totaled 57,507, with 48,336 full-time students, while state-added institutions of higher learning enjoyed an enrollment of 37,143 (25,396 full-time). Interestingly, perhaps, the mushrooming community college bloc embraced 19,887 students; 12,961 of whom were classified as full-time.

COULD BE HARE-RAISING—District Game Protector R. W. Wolf, of Conyngham, up in Luzerne County, filed this somewhat intriguing report with the State Game Commission:

"Even though we had a good game harvest this past year, some people still complain. "While releasing rabbits, an expert told me there are no rabbits because the Game Commission protects the ground-hogs who dig too many holes."

"He said the rabbits all sit in these holes. This is a little difficult to understand since there has been no protection or bag limit on woodchucks in the last 15 years!"

(As we've noted, it could be hare-raising — particularly should a groundhog decide to emerge from his burrow, only to find a rabbit sitting above him.)

HIGH COST OF SALARIES—During the 1966-67 fiscal year, General Fund expenditures for salaries of state payrollers totaled $317,761,763, according to the Legislative Budget and Finance Committee (the Legislature's "fiscal watchdog" arm). How have these taxpayer donations increased? Five years previously during the 1961-62 fiscal year, state payroll expenditures totaled $206,594,380.

A voyage carries recollections too. The Italian movie projectionist who tried to tout two nuns away from seeing Frank Sinatra in The Detective. He thought they were on the way in. They were coming out. There was a mother of five who talked her way into our state-room when we were on deck. She said she wanted an autograph for her son.

And there was the big chef in the puffy white hat who sent my wife whole ice-cold lobsters. The tails were stuffed with minced crabmeat. He said he wanted to make her happy. If he wasn't so big I'd have given him a hard look.

I do not know whether William Dennis Fugazy will make a success of his Go-Go ship. Some of the business men aboard said that they planned to hold cruise conventions aboard. As for me, I'm ready for another trip now. I must remember to dust off that skelele. . . .

I'm Ready Now

The sea is a royal blue dinner plate. The morsel in the center is the 20,000-ton liner Independence. Hour after hour, day after day, the ship sails southeast at 23 knots. It remains in the middle of the plate as though, in spite of all its struggle, it never moved.

And yet, each day the ship is 552 miles further south, the turbines humming, the cabin panels creaking the cradle rhythm, the pulse of the propellers in the deck. This is sea travel as it is on any ship.

There are 750 passengers of all sizes and attitudes. These are kept content by a crew of 540, who clean staterooms, feed them, serve snacks, pump clean salt water into two swimming pools, broil steaks and chill baked Alaska, pour liquor, exhibit first run motion pictures, bring bowls of fruit, run four elevators, and watch the passengers watching the crew from behind sun glasses.

Men unwind faster than women. The males were tigers the first night out, half bugged and whooping it up on the dance floor. Today, they doze in deck chairs, the paperback books open but unread. The ladies have overcome their timidity, and are eager to shake a rhumba, twist a cha-cha, or fall into the old reliable box step.

By day, the women come on deck in bathing suits best described as all meat and no material. The teeny bops gather energy as the hour grows late. There are weird tribal dances where the girl twists herself into the deck without ever knowing whether her dancing partner is on the same ship.

The older couples make the tropical nights romantic. They walk the sun deck in the night breeze, leaning against it as they hold hands. The forepeak of the ship is as dark as the sea. The night wind moans as it curls warmly around the king posts. The stars stand still, some blue-white, some blue, some winking yellow or red.

To me, the appeal is luxurious indolence. I relish the notion of living in a room which is within two hundred yards of restaurants, clubs, movies, and that all of it moves to distant countries. The mind slows, the body relaxes to the swing of the ship.

In two and a half days, the Independence was in San Juan. Four of us hired a taxi for $30 and did the tourist thing. We visited the ancient fort, Dorado Beach, Bayamon, flower gardens, and had lunch in the courtyard at El Convento. We were sleeping at 3 a.m. when the ship sailed for the Virgin Islands. At 7 a.m. it was at the dock at Charlotte Amalie.

This too is verdant green in crumpled mountains with sailboats moving like sedate swans in the bay. The shops were Danish in character, the streets were narrow, the prices right. My wife bought her favorite, Harvey's Bristol Cream; I bought a bamboo mug for number two daughter.

On the trip back, everybody rested in the sun from doing nothing. The young couples danced the Chippewa rain dance. Some of the men spent the day in the card room, playing gin or studying the market prices in the ship's newspaper. The women were in the nightclub, laughing at the same sexy jokes they laughed at last week.

Once a day, I religiously sought my typewriter under a bed and kicked it. The smiles of the waiters and stewards became more sincere as tip time approached. I drank coffee until my arteries began to tan. And let us not forget those between meals slabs of roquefort cheese and saltines and bowls of fresh fruit.

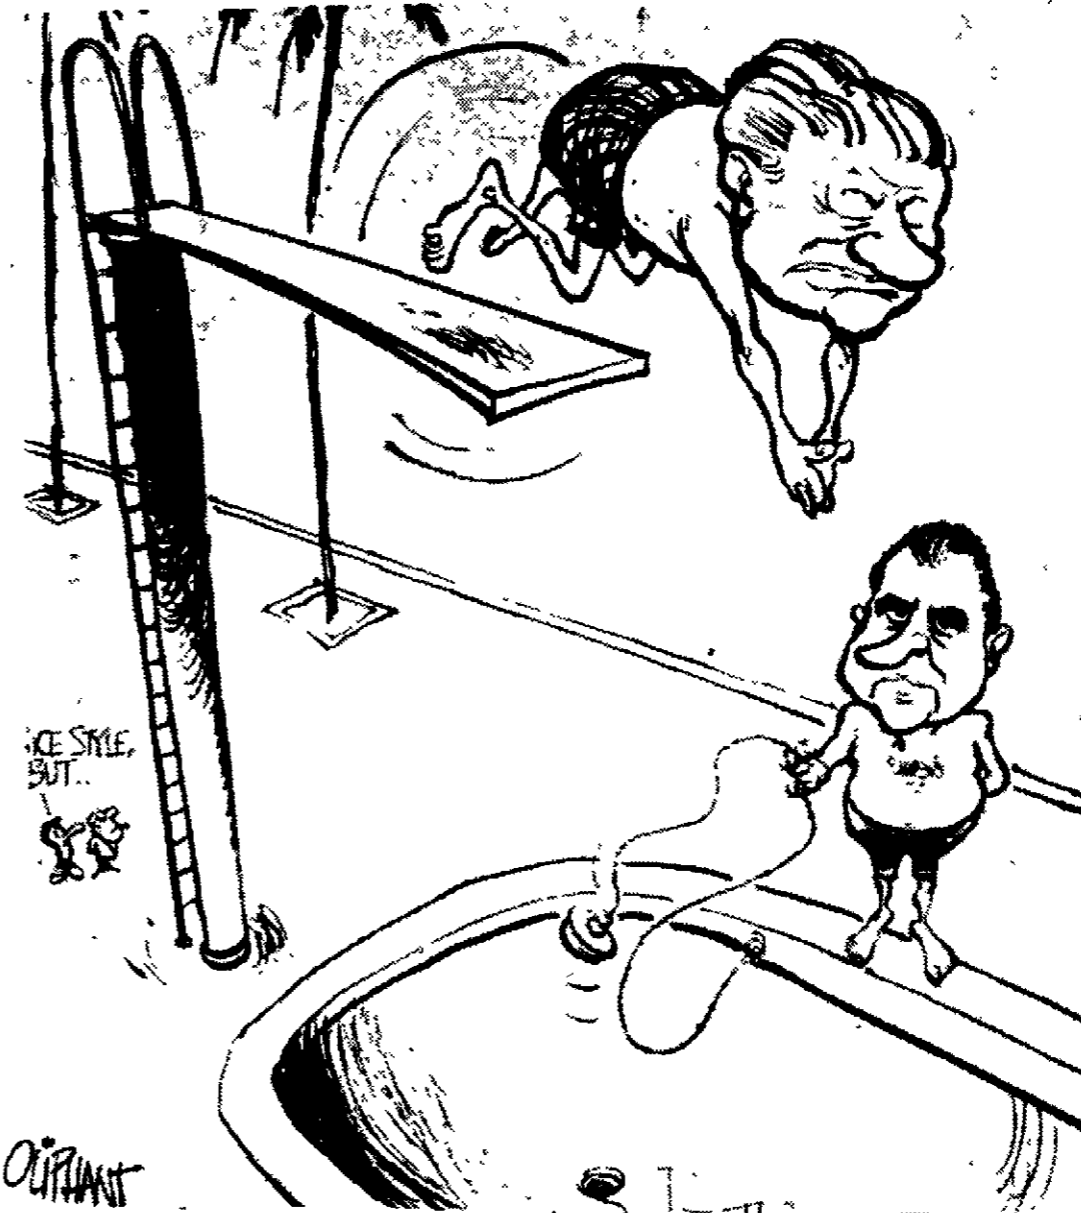

A voyage carries recollections too. The Italian movie projectionist who tried to tout two nuns away from seeing Frank Sinatra in The Detective. He thought they were on the way in. They were coming out. There was a mother of five who talked her way into our state-room when we were on deck. She said she wanted an autograph for her son.

PEARSON & ANDERSON

Spectacle Makes You Wonder

MIAMI BEACH—Sitting in the Miami Beach Auditorium, the auditorium Jackie Gleason made famous, you look out over a sea of delegates, some hoarse, some exhausted, some bored, a cross-section of American politics, and you wonder about conventions. Do they nominate the right man? Do they get at the truth? Do they probe the real problems of America?

There is Tom Dewey seated among the VIPs, quietly watching another man get nominated. Twice he has heard the convention roar its approval of him as the GOP nominee. Twice the convention has stamped, demonstrated, waved banners supporting him. Came November; twice he was defeated.

Dewey sits there today as Mayor John Lindsay of New York, a youthful, appealing figure, asks where the youth of America is. We need youthful leaders, he implies, to lead America.

Dewey was a very young man when he first ran for President. Too young. The impulsiveness of youth, too much overconfidence, not enough tolerance, too much exuberance, lost him the election. A good man, a good governor of New York, but too young.

Sitting in the Miami Beach Auditorium is another man, once a figure of great promise, Harold Stassen, youngest governor of Minnesota, a good governor, too soon hankered to be President. If he had waited, if he had not jumped the gun, he might not be snickered at in Miami Beach today.

Richard Nixon, a wiser man today, also jumped the gun when he hitched himself to Ike's coattails in 1952. He'd been only two years in the Senate when he made that daring climb. He'd had little experience, only headlines from communist-hunting.

The man who beat him in 1960 was also young and also made mistakes. John F. Kennedy would never have got embroiled in the Bay of Pigs fiasco had he been more seasoned. In 1960 Eisenhower passed up the Central Intelligence Agency proposal to invade Cuba. Ike was 70 and cautious. Kennedy, young, overconfident, gave the go-ahead.

In foreign policy, this set the United States back perhaps two years. It led to the missile showdown over Cuba; also to the Vienna showdown with Khrushchev, and the Berlin Wall which followed. According to George Ball, then Under Secretary of State, it led also to Kennedy's serious error in sending 18,000 troops into South Vietnam. That was the beginning of our Southeast Asian headaches. Kennedy learned. He aged in office, but his education was at the expense of the American people.

As the speakers at Miami Beach talk about youth, the delegates look bored. Some are sleeping, some remembering history. "Young men," says the author of "The Making of the President," Ted White, "haven't come forward this year to lead the country."

He's forgotten that young men have come forward — too many, too soon — in the past, and the results were not always happy.

Dan Evans, youthful governor of Washington, an attractive speaker, talks about racial inequality, the problem of the big city slums, the tragedy of the poor, the remedy of housing. He is too young to remember, but 25 years ago, when public housing was first proposed by Senators Bob Wagner of New York and Allen Ellender of Louisiana, it was the real estate lobby, supported by Republican Senators and Congressmen, which bitterly, consistently and on the whole successfully blocked housing moves to remedy the deterioration of the big cities.

Even the efforts of Mr. Republican himself, Sen. Bob Taft, who co-sponsored the housing bill, failed to break down that Republican opposition. Twenty years of delay, procrastination, and frustration for the big cities followed.

But Gov. Evans' memory is not so short that he cannot recall the events of last spring: how when the open housing bill was passed by the Senate, it was blocked by the real estate lobby in the House Rules Committee, where the change of only one vote could have passed it.

At that point, handsome Jerry Ford of Michigan, Republican leader of his house, who has been providing efficiently as convention chairman at Miami Beach, would not lift his finger to get the one vote necessary to push the vitally needed open housing bill out of committee.

Finally one Congressman, John B. Anderson of Illinois, was persuaded by the pressure of events, not by force, to change his vote.

Gov. Evans speaks on — eloquently, convincingly — of poverty and the need to remedy it. Some of his listeners, with sharper memories, recall the nine-month delay in passing the anti-poverty bill, due to Republican obstruction. They remember how government workers on the anti-poverty payroll were even suspended with no pay around Thanksgiving as a result of the Republican blockade. And they remember how it was only a pilgrimage of big-city mayors, all of them Democrats except Mayor Lindsay, which finally forced the passage of this bill to relieve the poor whose plight Gov. Evans emphasizes.

Two of the Republican leaders who played an active part in the convention at Miami Beach, Charles Goodell of N.Y. and Albert Quie of Minn., helped block the anti-poverty bill for nine long months. It was the last major bill to pass Congress last December.

So runs memory of the older delegates at Miami Beach. So operates the great institution of the American convention.

Letter To The Editor

A REPLY TO MISTER FISHERMAN

There appeared in a recent issue of Times Mirror an article complaining about the adverse effects the Kinzua dam has had on the river fishing. We will concede that the fishing is not now as good as it once was, but there is a great measure of selfishness in that complaint. The writer enumerated the work and expense he had put in his TEMPORARY summer residence, but if he had lived here in Warren over the years and suffered the recurrent damages we have experienced I am sure he would take it in a different attitude.

We remember the two damaging floods of the late forties when our cellars were flooded in most of the homes on the west end and the south side wherein we had to carry upstairs everything movable and then clean up a dirty, muddy cellar.

And who of us can forget the devastating flood of 1956 when a picture taken from the air looked like a city built out in a lake?

Every cellar on both the west end and south side was flooded and in many homes the living quarters were flooded, ruining all floor coverings and in some cases bulging and warping the floors. Many cars were stranded and practically ruined.

If a fire had broken out in any of those flooded areas it would have been a catastrophe as the fire equipment could not have reached the fire.

The Warren General Hospital was entirely surrounded with water and the only means to enter and leave was by row boat.

But now thanks to the Kinzua dam the floods are a thing of the past.

While we were battling the floods, Mr. Fisherman was most likely setting high and dry waiting for fishing season to come in.

The Allegheny river has had many destructive floods in the years gone by. In 1913 all rail traffic between Pittsburgh and Oil City was completely tied up by a bad flood and many O. C. railroad men, of whom I was one, were marooned for a number of days. The flood of 1936 destroyed millions of dollars in homes and furniture from Kittanning to Pittsburgh. While the Kinzua dam will not eliminate all floods it will greatly minimize the damage.

Before the building of the dam in times of dry weather and drought, the ditches and bays became pools of scum sending forth a nauseating stench, but now with a constant flow of water this is a thing of the past.

As for pleasure we need only to go up and look on the placid surface of beautiful Allegheny reservoir with its flotilla of water craft including sail boats and canoes to realize there are as many people enjoying them as there were fishermen down the river.

Just one thing more. There are as many fish in the Allegheny river as there were before the dam was built. It is just up to the fishermen to be smart enough to catch them.

Mr. Fisherman was speaking in behalf of those who fish and live in temporary seasonal homes.

I speak for the many people here in Warren who own their homes and after each flood would, without squawking or beefing, clean up and wait for the next one.

Warren is a beautiful little city in which we all take great pride and now that the flood peril is a thing of the past I am most happy to call it MY city.

With no apologies for challenging Mr. Fisher, I remain happy, serene and contented.

Most sincerely
— W. H. Campbell

GOP Takes Over Miami

MIAMI BEACH—As everyone knows, a national political convention is held specifically for the benefit of the press and the radio and television media. In the case of the Miami convention a certain number of Republicans were invited by the press to participate in the festivities.

I'm sorry to report that instead of playing a subsidiary role, the Republicans have taken advantage of the press media's hospitality and that the Republican Party has turned what was supposed to be a serious convention into a three-ring circus.

Hazlitt Harbinger, chairman of National Political Convention Press Club who was in charge of arrangements in Miami, said, "I find it inexcusable that the Republicans have made it appear that the correspondents only have a secondary role at this convention."

"Could you give me some examples, Mr. Harbinger?"

"Well, it was our understanding when we said the Republicans could come to Miami that they would sit in the balcony and participate as spectators. But instead they took over the platform of the convention hall, they grabbed the best seats on the floor and, because of their sheer numbers, they've made it impossible for the news media to do their job."

"In retrospect do you think it would have been better if the correspondents had said no Republicans would be accredited to the convention?"

"This is a free country, and you can't say to Republicans that they can't come to a Republican National Convention. But I do feel certain safeguards have to be set up so the press media can get going with America's business."

"What safeguards were you thinking of?"

"I think in the future we have to restrict the number of Republicans that are permitted into a Republican caucus. The hotel lobbies must be kept clear of Republicans so television can do its job. There should only be one Republican permitted on the convention hall platform at any time."

"We have to keep the political speeches to a minimum so that the TV correspondents can do more in-depth reporting. And I am going to suggest in the future that the official state Republican delegates be placed in the back of the convention hall so they won't block the view of the newspapermen, who after all have the responsibility of nominating a political candidate."

"Would your freeze on Republicans extend to the Republican candidates themselves?"

"No, I wouldn't go that far. I think in his own way Richard Nixon has as important a role to play at this convention as Walter Cronkite, and Nelson Rockefeller and his wife Happy have as much reason to be here as David Brinkley and Chet Huntley. My gripe is with the run-of-the-mill Republican who still thinks the Republican National Convention is being held for him."

"What can you do about him?"

"I asked."

"I really don't know. The trouble is that you let one Republican into a national convention, and they all want to get in."

THE WEIGHT WATCHER

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N.Y., Aug. 8—Tommy Trotter is one of the most weight-conscious of men, despite his figure that carries 190 pounds trimly on a six-foot frame. His weight-awareness has nothing to do with his own physical tone, though. It has to do with his profession. As the racing secretary and handicapper for the New York Racing Association, a position that is one of the most responsible in the realm of thoroughbred horse racing, Trotter has the important task of assigning the hurdles carried by the turf champions, near-champions and would-be champions.

"To me, weight is everything," says Trotter in his evaluation of the equine pattern. And how does he arrive at assigning weights for a race? "Well, it isn't too hard. I work out a set of weights from past performances, and at the same time Bud works out a set by himself, for the same race. Then we get together and compare what we come up with, and it's wonderful to see that we are in agreement as often as we are. Well, anyway, after we come out with our weights we announce them, and then we sit back and wait for the complaints."

Bud, it may be said, is Nathaniel (Bud) Hyland, who has been Trotter's assistant racing secretary and handicapper for the past half-dozen years that Tommy has been the boss. In addition to Bud, Trotter has another assistant Cliff McCarty.

The complaints, Trotter does not hesitate to say, are profuse, particularly from the top trainers when the main handicaps are under consideration.

A serious-faced, deliberate talker, Trotter will say with a dead pan, "From the way some of these trainers talk about me, you'd think that I had a grudge against them." Breaking out into a gleaming smile, Trotter will add, "These same trainers then go on to say 'You rate my horse a little too high. I never thought he was that good.'"

It is conceded, however, even by the most demanding weight wagers, in private conversation, that Trotter is eminently equitable in his assigning. Nobody dislikes him, as far as any position has been able to determine. Most horse people concede that somebody has to do the job, Trotter does it well, and the "sings and arrows," if any, fail to affect his popularity or disposition. He works in the open, available to all comers, except on rare occasions, when the pressure becomes too great. Then he slips off to a private hideaway where nobody except Hyland can reach him.

Trotter has been in racing almost all his life, which began in Louisville, Ky., on Sept. 21, 1926. His father, born in Iowa, and his grandfather, born in Indiana, were trainers and owners, who is Tommy says, "had their share of luck." In making his way to his present eminence Trotter touched all the bases, working at progressively important tasks in Colorado, Arizona, Illinois and Florida, before coming to New York, in 1960. He became the local handicapper when Frank (Jimmy) Kilroe transferred to Santa Anita.

His quiet, self-effacing manner would tend to cause the uninitiated to minimize Trotter's ability, but the record warrants satisfactory appraisal. Only last month, in the Sheepshead Bay Handicap at Aqueduct, Trotter came through with a handicapping accomplishment which aroused the general applause of the turf's cognoscenti. The race drew so many entries that it had to be split into two divisions. And the outcome of this dividing saw the respective high weights finish one-two by the narrowest of margins, short of a dead heat.

Still, Trotter does not consider that sequence his best of the year. His choice for one of his own handicaps is the Gravesend in which, oddly, his top weight, Tumiga, finished last. "But the off track was responsible for that. What pleased me was that the next high weight, Jim J., won with the others following pretty much the way they were rated."

Naturally, some handicaps are tougher than others. Take the recent Suburban and Brooklyn in which Dr. Fager and Damascus were the admitted stars.

"In making weight for the Suburban we felt that Damascus was better on recent performances and rated him higher than Dr. Fager. Of course, you know that Dr. Fager won. Then, when Damascus disappointed in the Monmouth, we switched and made Dr. Fager high weight for the Brooklyn. And Damascus won."

How about Hedevar, the celebrated "Rabbit" whose pace-setting role, it is generally conceded, helped his stablemate, Damascus, win that race? "Well, we couldn't weight Hedevar for distance on the basis of performance, so that's why we let him in light. Maybe he'll carry more in a sprint stakes," was Trotter's smiling understatement.

The bet he's ever weighted? "Kelso," unhesitatingly says Trotter. The best he's ever seen? Again, unhesitatingly, "Citatiox." As a 2 and 3-year-old, "Tom Fool," and "Kelso," for weight carrying ability.

Because of his name Trotter has had to take plenty of kidding based on the rivalry, real or fancied, between the thoroughbreds and the harness horses, commonly known as "the Trotters." Although he has a huge Currier and Ives trotting print on his office wall, Trotter says that he has seen only two such races. "I don't want to criticize the other fellows' game, but they just didn't stir me."

Sometimes he is created by the name on occasion. For example, at a racing gathering recently Trotter was introduced to a lady who said, "Oh, I'll never forget that name." Then, an hour or two later, she was taking her leave, she said to Tommy, "Goodbye, Mr. Pacer."

Pro Footballers Card Thirteen Exhibitions

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Mexican officials late Thursday cancelled the exhibition game scheduled between the Detroit Lions and Philadelphia Eagles in Mexico City Sunday afternoon.

No reason for the action was made in reports issued simultaneously in Mexico City, Philadelphia and Detroit.

The game was scheduled to be televised live in the United States by CBS-TV, starting at 3 p.m., EDT.

It was believed the game — first National Football League game in Mexico — was called off because of student unrest which has plagued the city since July 26.

There were also published reports of lack of interest in the game in the 106,802 seat Aztec Stadium. About half the seats were selling for 40 cents.

There was no immediate word on when, where or if the game would be played.

A Lion spokesman said an alternate site was being sought for Sunday since the game was under television contract.

If it is played, a total of 13 exhibition games are on tap, opening with two Friday night and running through Monday. And the second weekend of exhibition play also features two more matchups of NFL and AFL teams.

The senior NFL, embarrassed 1-3 in exhibitions with the AFL in the opening week of play, could even the count Saturday with Boston of the AFL meeting the NFL Saints at New Orleans and Kansas City of the AFL going to Minnesota to play the NFL Vikings.

Kansas City ran up 426 yards in a 38-14 rout of expansion Cincinnati of the AFL last week, while New Orleans blew a 17-7 lead before losing to Los Angeles 21-17. It's the opener for Boston and Minnesota, with Gary Cuzzo due to make his quarterbacking debut with the Vikings.

The Minnesota-Kansas City game could be a big one. The Vikings have yet to beat an AFL team and the Chiefs are 2-2 for a career against NFL opposition, including a loss to Green Bay in the first Super Bowl.

Kansas City Coach Hank Stram was pleased with his team's performance against the young Bengals, but has a warning note to sound against the Vikings.

The Green Bay Packers Shoot For Super Bowl And Fourth NFL Title

GREEN BAY, Wis. (AP) — The Green Bay Packers' magic numbers are four and three—and in that order.

Phil Bengtson, stepping up to the head coaching post after serving nine years as Vince Lombardi's top assistant, will be leading the Packers, hopefully, to an unprecedented fourth consecutive National Football League championship and a third straight Super Bowl victory.

Bengtson said, "I see no reasons why we can't continue winning."

Bengtson has virtually the same team that has run roughshod over the NFL for the last three years. But there does seem to be a few chinks in the battle-tested armor.

Besides Lombardi, the Packers also have lost place kicker Don Chandler, receiver Max McGee and guard Fred "Fuzzy" Thurston, three all-NFL performers.

Bart Starr, pro football's premier quarterback, is deadly accurate in both passing and play-calling. He's backed up by veteran Zeke Bratkowski and rookie Billy Stevens, whose position appears to have been stabilized by the loss of Don Horn to military service.

Veterans Elijah Pitts, Donny Anderson, Jim Grabowski, Travis Williams and Chuck Mercein, and rookies Brendan McCarthy and Doug Goodwin, are battling for the running back spots while another veteran, Ben Wilson, is sidelined with a knee injury.

Two rookies who saw action with the College All-Stars last week are fighting for berths on the offensive line.

Top draft choice Fred Carr is competing with veterans Marv Fleming and Phil Vandersaele at tight end. Carr also can be used on defense.

Another first-round draft pick, Bill Lueck of Arizona, is bidding for a berth behind incumbents Gale Gillingham and Jerry Kramer at guard. The tackle spots will be manned by Bob Skoronski and 12-year veteran Forrest Gregg.

Bob Hyland and Ken Bowman are battling it out for the center post, while Jay Bachman is the swing man at center and both guard spots.

Six candidates are operating at split end and flanker, including last year's starters, Carroll Dale and Boyd Dowler. Claudis

James, a member of the regular roster the first two weeks of the 1967 season; Bob Long, recuperating from knee surgery; rookie Andy Beath of Duke, and taxi squad member Dave Dunaway complete the contingent.

On defense, the principal struggle will be in the line.

Frank Winkler of Memphis State, Leon Crenshaw and Richard Cash, all rookies, are striving to join holdovers Willie Davis, Lionel Aldridge, Henry Jordan, Ron Kostelnik and Jim Weatherall.

Herb Adderley, Bob Jeter, Tom Brown and Willie Wood return as the defensive backs, with Doug Hart and John Rowsor the swing man for all four.

The Packers' linebackers, considered the finest trio in pro football, return intact: Dave Robinson, Ray Nitschke and Lee Roy Caffey.

With the retirement of Chandler, Bengtson and Lombardi—who is devoting full time now to his general manager's post—Green Bay went to the trade market and grabbed Wade Trynham from the Atlanta Falcons.

Trynham, Mercein and Kramer will handle the field goal kicking chores, while Donny Anderson returns as the team's punter.

Lombardi, in his nine-year career as Packer coach, won 141 games, lost 39 and tied 4. That's pretty high mark that Bengtson is shooting for.

West Allis, Wis., Repeats As VFW Teener Champ

EASTON, Pa. (AP) — Scott Ferguson slammed a two-run homer in the first inning and it was all pitcher Greg Pinter needed as West Allis, Wis., whipped Greenville, N.C., 3-0, Thursday to repeat as champions in the national VFW teener baseball tournament.

Pinter fired a five-hitter, pitching out of jams in the third and seventh inning, to record the victory. The Wisconsin team added a meaningless run in the fourth inning on a walk, single, error and wild pitch.

Ferguson, voted the tourney's Most Valuable Player, cracked his home run into the center-field seats after Russ Fabritz had singled with two out.

Greenville worked Pinter for two walks in the third inning, but Pinter got the side out by retiring two batters. In the seventh, the North Carolinians rapped two straight singles to open the inning, but Pinter again put down the uprising by retiring three hitters in a row.

West Allis was undefeated in three games in the double elimination tourney for 13-to-15-year-olds.

Greenville had advanced to the finals with a dramatic, last-inning 5-4 victory over Union, N.J., in the morning round.

Trailing 4-3 going into the bottom of the seventh, Stan Cobb tripled to open the inning and scored the tying run on a squeeze bunt by Russ Smith.

Smith then stole second, went to third on a single and scored on a squeeze by Byron Dickens. West Allis, Wis. 200100-0-392 Greenville, N.C. 000000-0-51

Toe Blake Beats Assault Charge

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Former coach Hector "Toe" Blake and player Claude Provost of the National Hockey League champion Montreal Canadiens were acquitted Thursday of a charge they assaulted a fan last Nov. 19.

Superior Court Judge Joseph A. Sprinkle Jr. made the ruling. He cited conflicting testimony as to who was the aggressor in the fight during which Bernie Weisman, 39, was injured.

Witnesses testified Weisman had been heckling Blake during a game in the Los Angeles Sports Arena between the Canadiens and the Los Angeles Kings.

Blake, 55, and Provost, 34, were on trial before a jury of four women and eight men on a charge of assault with a deadly weapon—hockey sticks.

Judge Sprinkle told the jury, "I have taken the case away from you and ordered a judgment of acquittal."

Cruz and Rojas in Title Gos

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Lightweight king Carlos Teo Cruz and World Boxing Association featherweight titlist Raul Rojas will defend their crowns in a double world championship on Sept. 14, the Olympic Boxing Club announced Thursday.

Cruz, of the Dominican Republic, meets 19-year-old Long Beach, Calif., puncher Mando Ramos in one 15-rounder at the Los Angeles Coliseum.

In the other half of the outdoor feature, Rojas of San Pedro, Calif., puts his title on the line against Japan's Sho Satoyo who outpointed him in a non-title affair.

BOOSTER BOOSTERS

A record number of returns has resulted from the Sports Boosters efforts to solicit advertising for the 1968 football program through a mail campaign. Thus far half of last year's advertisers have submitted renewal contracts and many new local businesses will also appear in the program.

Booster President John Smith stated that the successful mail campaign will end today and urged that all firms who have not returned their contracts do so this weekend.

Beginning Monday a group of Boosters will begin a person-to-person follow-up campaign to reach the balance of past advertisers.

All members of the Board of Directors and other interested Boosters interested in helping on this project are asked to attend a meeting at the home of Dick Kerven, 9 Jackson avenue, on Sunday evening, August 10, at 7:30.

GOLFING WITH Arnold Palmer

—Golf's first Million Dollar P.G.A. Winner—

ALIGN BOTTOM EDGE OF CLUBFACE

It may seem like a minor point, but I'd like to stress the importance of properly placing the clubhead behind the ball.

Because the top edge of the clubhead is cut at an angle facing to the right of the target (see illustration), it is relatively simple to mis-align the clubface.

Make sure that your alignment is based on the bottom edge—not the top—of the face. Make sure that this leading edge is squared at exact right angles to the target line.

If you have any doubt about the alignment of your clubface—if you consistently hit off-line in the same direction—I suggest you have a friend look at your positioning to make sure you are on target.

Foreign Comment on Nomination Reflects Little Enthusiasm

LONDON (AP) — Richard M. Nixon's nomination as the Republican presidential candidate received mixed foreign reaction Thursday. It was most noteworthy for restraint in the Soviet Union, where he has been a target of attacks in the past.

Moscow radio said Nixon's announcement that he might visit the Soviet capital was a "trump card" he played to help win him the nomination.

While not saying directly that such a visit would be welcome, the radio avoided criticism of the idea, leaving the impression that Soviet leaders might be interested. The broadcast also said Nixon made "meaningful hints about his desire to find a settlement of the war in Vietnam."

The Moscow tone contrasted with editorial comment in Communist Poland where the Warsaw Evening Express called

Nixon an "old reactionary" who was "on the side of the hawks on Vietnam."

There was praise in West Germany, where a government party called Nixon a "convincing statesman" needed at a difficult moment in international affairs.

Some approval was voiced in other allied nations that would be working with a Nixon administration if he won the White House in November. There was also cool and hostile comment whose consensus seemed to be that the GOP was turning back the clock.

The London Evening News, a pro-Conservative independent, suggested Nixon was uninspiring, "at best a reconditioned politician."

The Financial Times said in an editorial written before the roll call at Miami Beach: "Viewed from this side of the Atlantic, Gov. (Nelson) Rockefeller might appear a more attractive choice. He is a genuine liberal in his approach to domestic problems and internationalist by outlook."

A liberal Norwegian newspaper, the Oslo Dagbladet, headlined its comment on the outcome: "A Great Disappointment."

"Richard M. Nixon does not represent the new leadership the United States so badly needs," it said.

The liberal Expressen of Stockholm indicated that it, too, was disappointed. Expressen said: "Richard Nixon is a candidate for those who have privileges to defend. It is a gloomy prospect."

Editorial writers of France, which was deeply involved last spring in French political disorders, voiced critical views.

The independent Le Monde said the Republican party went back to the Eisenhower era to do its hunting, adding: "Instead of the difficult search for renewal, the Republican delegates preferred the ease of a return to the past."

A middle-road Rome newspaper, Memento Sera, had some kind words. It said Nixon has an iron will, a supreme capacity for propaganda and has "learned to be more political and indulge less in politicking."

Die Welt of Hamburg suggested Nixon's political renaissance after his defeats in 1960 and 1962 "is the most surprising phenomenon of this election year."

In a similar vein the independent La Stampa of Turin, Italy, said it was being called "the greatest resurrection since Lazarus."

Agnew, Son of Greek Immigrant, Caps Meteoric Political Career

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — Maryland's Gov. Spiro T. Agnew, son of a Greek immigrant who changed his name from Anagnostopoulos, capped a meteoric political career today when he was named by Richard M. Nixon as his choice for vice presidential running mate in November.

A Democrat-turned-Republican, Agnew is 49, one of the youngest governors the state has ever had and the first of Greek descent.

Born the son of a Greek restaurateur in Baltimore, Agnew reached adolescence during the depression years and frequently helped his family supplement their modest income with odd jobs after school.

He watched helplessly as his father's restaurant business failed and the elder Agnew was forced to eke a living by hawking vegetables.

Graduating from a Baltimore public high school in 1937, he entered Johns Hopkins University as a chemistry major, but after three years decided that test tubes were just not his calling.

He transferred to the University of Baltimore night law school and took a job with the Maryland Casualty to support himself. It was while there that he met a secretary named Elizabeth Isobel (Judy) Judford. Four months later they were engaged.

There was an air of restraint in the first comment from Tass, the official Soviet news agency. It said Nixon's statements in Miami Beach had been "somewhat more considered and moderate in tone than his bellicose pronouncements of some months ago."

Gov. Shafer Pledges Support To Nixon

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Gov. Raymond P. Shafer of Pennsylvania sent Republican presidential nominee Richard M. Nixon a congratulatory telegram Thursday pledging the support of the Pennsylvania Republican party through the fall presidential campaign.

In a "Dear Dick" telegram, Shafer said:

"Congratulations on your excellent and well deserved victory. All Pennsylvania Republicans will now pull behind you for victory in November. I stand at your service."

Shafer also talked to Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller of New York shortly after he returned to his hotel at 3 a.m., following the GOP presidential balloting and congratulated Rockefeller on the type of campaign he conducted.

The bulk of Pennsylvania's 64-man delegation backed Rockefeller in a losing cause Wednesday on the first and only ballot of the convention.

poned, however, by World War II, and it was not until he graduated from Officers' candidate School at Fort Knox, Ky., in 1942 that the two were married.

Two years later, he was shipped overseas and saw action in France and Germany, including the Battle of the Bulge. He won four battle stars, the Bronze Star and the Combat Infantry Badge.

It was when he returned home in 1946 that he switched his registration from Democrat to Republican. But his father clung to the Democratic party until the younger Agnew was elected executive of populous Baltimore County on the Republican ticket in 1962.

Discharged from service in 1946, Agnew returned to law school and earned his degree a year later.

As his practice grew, he devoted more and more time to civic activities and his first move into politics came as president of Loch Raven Community Council, a suburban improvement association, when he fought to obtain open spaces legislation in Baltimore County. In 1957, he was appointed minority member of the county's Board of Zoning Appeals and later became its chairman.

It was his stand in favor of open housing that helped him to victory over George P. Mahoney in the state's gubernatorial race in 1966. Mahoney concentrated on capturing white backlash votes with his slogan "Your home is your castle, protect it."

Civil disturbances during the past two years have altered Agnew's stance on civil rights, although the governor insists that it is not he who has changed.

"I haven't changed," he told reporters recently. "I'm standing still, it's just that others are moving more to the left."

Although the tone changed gradually, it crystallized clearly at a meeting the governor called with Negro leaders in Baltimore shortly after that city, like others across the country, had been rocked by riots following the assassination of the Rev. Martin Luther King.

He charged that they did not speak out against what he termed Negro racists because they were afraid.

"You were intimidated by veiled threats; you were strung by insinuations that you were Mr. Charlie's Boy, by epithets like 'Uncle Tom,'" he said.

"Somewhere the objectives the civil rights movement have been obscured in a surge of emotional oversimplification. Somewhere the goal of equal opportunity has been replaced by the goal of instantaneous economic equality," he said.

Half of the Negro leaders angrily stomped from the meeting, but the governor's switch to a more hard-line position continued.

And just a week ago, at his last news conference before he left for Miami, the governor said flatly that police officers should not hesitate to shoot looters during riots when they failed to heed commands to halt.

"If the general public gets used to the idea that as long as you can out-leg a police officer you can get away shot free, the whole system of law and order will break down," he said.

A long-time backer of Gov. Nelson Rockefeller for the GOP presidential nomination, Agnew obviously became disenchanted with the New York governor's on-again, off-again antics, and was privately more than a little miffed when Rockefeller stated flatly in March that he would not accept the presidential nomination of his party.

Rocky Swallows Chagrin, Stresses Party Harmony

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller swallowed his chagrin over Richard M. Nixon's choice of a running mate and went before the Republican National Convention Thursday night to make a few party-harmony remarks.

Associates of the New York governor said he was so displeased by Nixon's selection of Maryland Gov. Spiro T. Agnew for the vice presidential nomination that he had considered snubbing the convention and going directly home.

Rockefeller was said to feel that Nixon deliberately had insulted him by picking a candidate who once had been in Rockefeller's corner. Agnew endorsed Nixon this week at a critical point in the struggle over the presidential nomination.

Rockefeller refused to comment publicly on Agnew's selection, except to say tersely that it was the presidential nominee's right to choose his running mate.

Responding to warm applause as he appeared at the convention speaker's rostrum with his wife, Happy, at his side, Rockefeller said he had come to congratulate Nixon.

"The convention has spoken and I support the decision of the convention," he declared, touching off more cheers.

After his brief talk to the delegates, Rockefeller returned to his hotel suite for a private party given by the four surviving children of his first marriage.

Rockefeller aides said he did not want to be present for Nixon's acceptance speech or to appear on the platform with Nixon. They said he had told the convention chairman, Rep. Gerald R. Ford of Michigan, that, unless he could appear briefly by himself, he would not come at all.

Reporters sought Rockefeller's opinion which he and his wife, Happy, walked through the lobby of their hotel enroute to an afternoon swimming engagement at the nearby estate of friends.

"Gentlemen, I am not available for comment," Rockefeller said, walking on.

Persons close to the governor said he is annoyed also by New York Mayor John V. Lindsay's agreement to second Agnew's nomination.

Reagan Praises Choice

MIAMI BEACH (AP) — Gov. Ronald Reagan Thursday praised Richard M. Nixon's choice for vice president, Gov. Spiro T. Agnew, calling him "a darn good man."

Defeated in his own bid for the Republican presidential nomination, Reagan said, "How can you lose when you go back to being governor of California?"

Reagan repeated his pledge to campaign for the new nominee and Nixon invited him to a meeting in San Diego next week.

Reagan said he has "known and admired Ted Agnew at governors' conferences and as a friend."

"He is acceptable to all segments of the country," Reagan said of Agnew, governor of Maryland.

All through the convention, Reagan was sympathetic to the demands of Southern states for a conservative vice president.

As his aides talked about the defeat, they said that Reagan's failure to dent Southern states bound to Nixon and voting on a unit rule wrecked Reagan's chances.

One backer, who declined the use of his name, said that if Mississippi, Florida and South Carolina had not been bound by a unit rule and Reagan's supporters had been free to vote for the Californian, "we'd still be balloting over there."

Christopher Wren designed more than 50 churches for London, but he favored St. Mary-le-Bow. Its famous steeple towers 222 feet high and is topped with a nine-foot dragon.

Lambeth Conference Debates Ordaining of Women

LONDON — At the tenth Lambeth Conference Thursday Bishops opened debate on whether to upset cherished Anglican tradition and begin ordaining women as deacons, priests and even bishops.

If approved, such action could lead to major changes in the Episcopal Church in the United States, where the role of women in the ministry has been a consistent source of controversy. At issue was a report on the ministry submitted by the Most Rev. Donald Coggan, the Archbishop of York and England's second-ranking Anglican official after the Archbishop of Canterbury.

The document spoke of the "rapidly changing status of women in society in most parts of the world" and declared: "There seems to be good reason to take a fresh look now at the question of women and the priesthood."

It recommended that the 460 bishops approve the ordination of women to the priesthood and ask national churches and provinces to "consider making appropriate provision within their own spheres."

The document also stated that if the priesthood were to be open to women, "so in principle would be the Episcopate."

The Lambeth Conference, which normally meets every ten years, consists of the bishops of Anglican churches in more than 50 countries. It has no legislative powers, but its recommendations carry considerable influence on national Anglican bodies.

The issue of women in the priesthood became a center of controversy in the Episcopal Church several years ago when the Rt. Rev. James A. Pike, then bishop of California, unsuccessfully attempted to ordain a deaconess, Mrs. Phyllis Edwards, as a deacon.

In the Episcopal Church, as in other Anglican bodies, women are not admitted to the priesthood. Deaconesses also do not have the same status as deacons and are not permitted to serve communion.

Last September the General Convention of the Episcopal Church, its policymaking body, voted to submit the question of admitting women as delegates to its next session in 1970.

Thursday's resolution, which was part of a major document on various aspects of the ministry, was referred back to a committee for further study.

During Thursday's debate the proposal drew attacks from Anglo-Catholic bishops, who contended that the ordination of women has no biblical foundation and is contrary to longstanding ecclesiastical tradition.

The Most Rev. Marcus Loane, Archbishop of Sydney, also said that he regards the idea as "in conflict with the headship of Christ."

"I believe that if the ministry is thrown open to women, it would sound the death knell for the church in its appeal to men," he said.

Other bishops, however, including several from the U.S., defended the contention of the document that there is no valid theological basis for opposition to women in the ministry.

The Rt. Rev. George W. Barrett, bishop of Rochester, N.Y., declared: "The only arguments appear to be emotional. There may be a deep division between the sexes or it may be due to prejudice."

He also argued for the proposal on the grounds that "if we are going to reject this, I think we should be very leery about telling the world about racial discrimination."

One American bishop said that he was "encouraged" by the amount of support he found for the proposal, not only from Americans and Canadians but Africans and Asians as well.

Unemployment Edges Upward

HARRISBURG (AP) — Total unemployment edged upward in Pennsylvania during the month of July, but the Bureau of Employment Security said the increase was in line with normal seasonal trends.

The number of unemployed workers in the state last month was estimated at 177,000. The June figure was 176,000. The unemployment rate also increased slightly from 3.5 to 3.6 per cent of the civilian work force, but even with the addition the rate was the lowest of any July on record.

The previous July low was established in 1966 when the number of jobless totaled 181,000, or 3.7 per cent. Last year at this time, unemployment totaled 200,000, or 4.1 per cent.

The national unadjusted rate of unemployment in July was 4.0 per cent, and the seasonally adjusted rate was 3.7 per cent, the bureau reported.

8 Policemen Killed, 47 Wounded By Gunfire in U.S. Since July 1

Eight policemen have been shot to death and at least 47 wounded by gunfire in U.S. cities since July 1.

In the summer's worst incident, snipers killed three officers and wounded eight in Cleveland, Ohio, July 23.

Of the other officers killed since July 1, three were gunned down by persons caught in allegedly criminal acts, one was killed by a rifle fired by a suspect and the fourth was shot after being called to break up a quarrel between a woman and a rejected suitor.

Among those wounded, 10 were struck by shotgun pellets in disturbances by Negro demonstrators in Peoria, Ill., on July 30 and seven more suffered similar wounds Wednesday in disorders in Harvey, Ill.

In Brooklyn, N.Y., two patrolmen were shotgunned from ambush and wounded after they answered a phony call to quiet a family quarrel.

Two black militants have been charged with murder in the Cleveland deaths.

Other police dead include: Detective Robert Gomer, 34, of the Michigan State Police, shot in the back by a rifle bullet Thursday in the Detroit suburb of Inkster while trying to arrest a Negro youth suspected of firing at a patrol car. The youth was shot dead in a chase which followed. Two other officers were wounded.

A Detroit policeman killed Monday night after being called to break up a quarrel between a rejected suitor and a woman. A suspect is a police prisoner at Detroit General Hospital recovering from a bullet wound in the head.

A Washington patrolman killed July 2 when he tried to arrest a man on a robbery complaint.

A patrolman killed in Philadelphia July 15 while investigating a $59 street car robbery.

In San Antonio, Tex., a policeman was killed Monday by a 14-year-old boy he had arrested.

Cleveland Mayor Carl B. Stokes called the outbreak in his city "just plain deadly warfare."

He has agreed to consider police demands for higher-powered rifles, armored vans, shields and specialized training. In New York, the Patrolmen's Benevolent Association has offered a $10,000 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the sniper who shotgunned the two patrolmen in Brooklyn.

PBA President John Cassese said his group was "determined to take every possible action to insure that this wild lashing-out at the nearest symbol of authority is stopped cold."

Two other New York policemen were wounded July 3 in Central Park by a man who already had slain a woman and fatally shot an elderly man. A Tactical Patrol Force patrolman was wounded by a sniper on the same day.

In Los Angeles Monday night, two officers stopped a suspicious looking car with four Negroes inside. Officials said one of the men drew a gun and fired and the policemen shot back.

When it was over, three of the Negroes were dead, and both officers were wounded.

Humane Society Pleads For Homes for Six Dogs

LOOKING FOR A PLAYMATE

Jackie is one of six dogs being kept by the Warren County Humane Society slated to live but a few days longer unless homes can be found for them. She has been described as having the personality of a circus clown, ideal for children.

Jackie is a lady with all the tendencies of a circus dog. She's brown and white, ten months old and does flips and high jumps cute as a button.

Jackie like several other dogs is being cared for by the Warren County Humane Society. According to the dog committee at the society, Jackie along with five other dogs must be placed this week, since they have already been kept past the regular length of time allowed.

If you have been wanting a dog, but putting it off, why not contact the Humane Society and ask about Dixie, a lonely, sad black and white Cocker-Collie type female. Dixie is about a year old. Another Cocker-Collie type female is also available. This friendly pup with a spotted face answers to the name of "Freckles".

If Jackie, Dixie and Freckles have already been placed, you still have a choice of three other dogs. There is Rover, a tri colored, Houndtype male, which would make a fine companion and with a little encouragement should be a hunter. Lady would make an excellent farm dog. She is a small black and brown Collie type that loves children. Last but not least the Humane Society has a nameless small-type German Shepherd. Rust colored with intense shiny eyes this dog will make a good watch dog.

Why not call the Humane Society, telephone 726-1961, and drop in and see these dogs, whose time is nearly up. Who knows, you may even want to take one home.

Injured in Crash

Doris M. Colter, 45, 906 Conewango ave., was injured Thursday morning when her car ran into a no parking sign and a tree along Conewango ave.

Mrs. Colter apparently blacked out at the wheel, police said. She was admitted to Warren General Hospital where her condition was listed as satisfactory.

Former Steelworkers Head Predicts Nixon Victory in Nov.

PITTSBURGH (AP) — David J. McDonald, former president of the United Steelworkers union, predicted Thursday that Richard M. Nixon will be elected president in November.

McDonald, a registered Democrat who said he voted for the late Sen. Robert F. Kennedy in the California primary before backing Nixon, also called Nixon's choice of Maryland Gov. Spiro Agnew as his Republican running mate a "wise one."

Admitting he was not completely aware of Agnew's views, McDonald said he expected Agnew would be used to help the Republican ticket in the South.

The former union chief spoke at a news conference. He came to Pittsburgh after a speaking engagement at Vancouver, B.C.

McDonald has been campaigning for Nixon for several weeks. He said he decided to support the former vice president even before voting for Kennedy in June. "I didn't think Sen. Kennedy had a chance for the Democratic nomination," he said.

McDonald said he "couldn't care less" what his former comrades in labor thought of his support for the GOP candidate.

The 1960 presidential election, McDonald said, proved Nixon's widespread support. Nixon lost by 102,000 votes.

Regarding the campaign, the former union chief said he expects the problem of the cities to be a key issue. He called on management to become involved in the country's social problem. "I made the same plea 12 years ago," he said.

"There is now an embryonic movement on the part of management to set up programs in ghetto areas," he said. "But the social awareness has to become more widespread."

McDonald, who was defeated by current USW president I. W. Abel, avoided discussion of the recent steel settlement. "I really know little about it," he said, adding jokingly, "I've been in Palm Springs and they have a small paper."

He did say, however, that he was "glad" there was a settlement instead of a strike.

Asked if he would take part in upcoming steel union elections, he declared, "I said 'Act III, Scene III, Curtain' on June 1, 1965. Today I still say 'Act III, Scene III, curtain.' The end."

PLUGGING PLAYHOUSE PRODUCTION

Sneaky Fitch is in town. The next loud bang you hear will be the fatal report of Sneaky's six gun as he guns down the town bum. No, Warren has not regressed to the age of gun duels in the streets, and David Stoudnour who portrays Sneaky Fitch in the Playwright Playhouse production of "The Death and Life of Sneaky Fitch" is really not violent; however, Thursday Stoudnour and other members of the playhouse staged a gun fight on the streets of Warren to draw attention to the current production being presented through Aug. 17, at Playwright Playhouse. Members of the cast taking part in Wednesday's spoof on gunfighters, and the old west, are left to right, Stoudnour, Anne Buttrick, Marjorie Melnick, Jennifer Zuckerman, Annette Bamberger and Denny Lane. Claims Right to Appear in Debates

HARRISBURG (AP) — Frank W. Gaydos, Constitutional Party candidate for the U.S. Senate, charged his two major party opponents Thursday with being lawmakers who were abetting lawbreakers.

Gaydos said he had a legal right under the Federal Communications Act to appear in the televised debates between U.S. Sen. Joseph S. Clark, a Democrat, and the Republican challenger, U.S. Rep. Richard S. Schweiker.

In identical letters to Clark and Schweiker, Gaydos said: "I am surprised at your refusal to respond to my telegram regarding my rightful partici-

Pennsylvania Delegation Not Happy with Nixon's Choice

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP)—While Gov. Shafer said Thursday he would respect Richard M. Nixon's selection of Maryland Gov. Spiro T. Agnew as his vice presidential running mate, state Republican Chairman John C. Jordan conceded many of the Pennsylvania delegation were not happy with the choice.

Shafer admitted shortly after Nixon's announcement that New York Mayor John Lindsay or U.S. Sen. Charles Percy of Illinois would have been his personal preferences as attractive additions to the Nixon ticket.

But he called Agnew a "highly respected" governor whom he considered a "capable and intelligent individual."

And, he said at a news conference: "I personally will do everything possible to elect the entire Republican ticket down the line."

Jordan, however, in a separate news conference, commented:

"We had hoped a more urban-oriented person would be selected such as Ray Shafer, Lindsay or Percy. We are, frankly, quite disappointed and there is a strong feeling about this within the delegation."

He added that even delegates who backed Nixon for president, plus U.S. Rep. Richard S. Schweiker, the party's senatorial candidate who was uncommitted on a presidential choice, complained they did not feel Agnew "is identified strongly with urban knowledge such as Lindsay is."

Jordan also reported that Lindsay called him personally to halt a reported movement within the delegation to nominate him for vice president.

Shafer said he would have no part of a floor fight to block Agnew. Jordan said he would neither actively encourage or discourage one.

The governor said he was not consulted by Nixon on the Agnew selection and Jordan complained about it.

"We feel that Pennsylvania is sufficiently important that its governor should have been consulted," the chairman declared.

While Shafer was advocating a line of party unity, Agnew's selection did not set so well immediately with other members of the GOP contingent here.

Nixon's always said he wanted a guy who was familiar with the problems of the urban states and the cities—sure he did," one state Republican complained sarcastically when the announcement reached poolside of the hotel where the delegates relaxed.

Roughly two-thirds of the state's 64-man delegation followed Shafer's lead in supporting Rockefeller on the first and only ballot of the convention late Wednesday night and early Thursday morning.

Pennsylvania's vote was 41 for Rockefeller, 22 for Nixon and one—Harold Fry of Berks County—for California Gov. Ronald Reagan.

At the time the tally reached Pennsylvania, Nixon's count stood at 484 to only 205 for Rockefeller. Once Wisconsin's 30 votes put Nixon over the top of 667, Shafer joined with the bulk of the other delegations in casting a unanimous ballot for the former vice-president.

Barr Supports Effort to Boycott California Grapes

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Mayor Joseph M. Barr said Thursday he supports nationwide efforts to boycott California grapes.

He urged Pittsburgh residents to refuse to buy them and to urge storekeepers not to stock them.

"This boycott represents a significant development in the three-year battle of the United Farmworkers against the grape growers and their lobbyists, who have excluded the workers from the provisions of the National Labor Relations Act, the Minimum Wage Law and the Taft-Hartley Act," the mayor said.

Barr said, after a meeting with the UFW, he was gratified by the support organized labor in Pittsburgh is given the boycott.

Fingerprints Show Man Is Fugitive from Georgia

Both the County sheriff's office and Warren borough police claimed credit Thursday for furnishing the evidence that led to the determination that an inmate at the county jail is a fugitive from Georgia.

The sheriff's office said Ben J. Stevens, in jail awaiting court action on a drunken driving charge, was fingerprinted and his prints sent to the FBI as routine procedure under the National Criminal Identification System. Stevens was committed to the county jail July 19, and the prints were taken subsequent to his incarceration, the sheriff's office report said.

Borough police said Stevens, 37, whose real name is Jack David Stephens, was arrested by a borough police officer early on the morning of July 18 and that the critical fingerprint prints were taken by the borough department before he was remanded to the county jail.

The car carried Alabama license plates, local police said, but it also bore a dealer's identification tag from Hagenlin Auto Sales in Jamestown, N.Y. A check with Jamestown police revealed that Stephens had been arrested the week before by New York State Police on drunken driving charges. Later in the day the auto agency confirmed that the car had been stolen.

Both borough police and the sheriff's office received information from the FBI and Georgia officials indicating Stephens had escaped from the southern prison in July of 1967.

Stephens had been serving a term for burglary, forgery and possession of burglary tools. His record indicated time served for first degree murder among a number of other crimes.

County Seeks Appalachian Funds

A representative of the state Department of Commerce is expected to meet with the commissioners of the Rouse Home within two weeks to discuss this county's qualifications for receiving Appalachian funds for low cost housing for the elderly.

Chairman Thomas J. Donnelly said he wrote to Commerce Secretary Clifford L. Jones in May to determine what the Rouse commissioners must do to make application for funds.

"Right now we have no low cost housing," Donnelly said, "and we need it badly."

"What we're trying to find out is whether we qualify and if so how much money would be available."

The funds being sought are federal monies dispensed through the state government.

Bell, Electricians Agree on Contract

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Bell Telephone of Pennsylvania and Local 1944, International Union of Electrical Workers, AFL-CIO have agreed on a three-year contract for 7,940 telephone operators and clerical workers across the state.

Bell said the contract will cost it an extra $10 million in the next three years.

Local 1944 members still must ratify the agreement, which also provides improvements in holiday pay, vacations, sick pay, hospitalization benefits and life insurance.

Joan Siegmund, cousin of the bride, was matron of honor. Joy Seigel, Carole Schaeffer and Margaret Lawson, were bridesmaids. The attendants wore gowns of cotton daisy floral lace, which featured A-line crepe skirts and back trains with self bows. Each wore a floral chiffon headpiece with a bouffant veil. The matron of honor wore mint in color while the other attendants wore pink, apricot and turquoise. Each attendant carried a bouquet similar to the bride's.

Edward Siegmund served as best man. Timothy Kronenwetter, brother of the bride, Roger Phaler and William Samuels were ushers.

The bride's mother wore a lace powder blue dress and coat with matching accessories, and a corsage of white daisies and poms.

The wedding dinner was held at the C. M. F. Club where a reception was held in the afternoon for 200 guests.

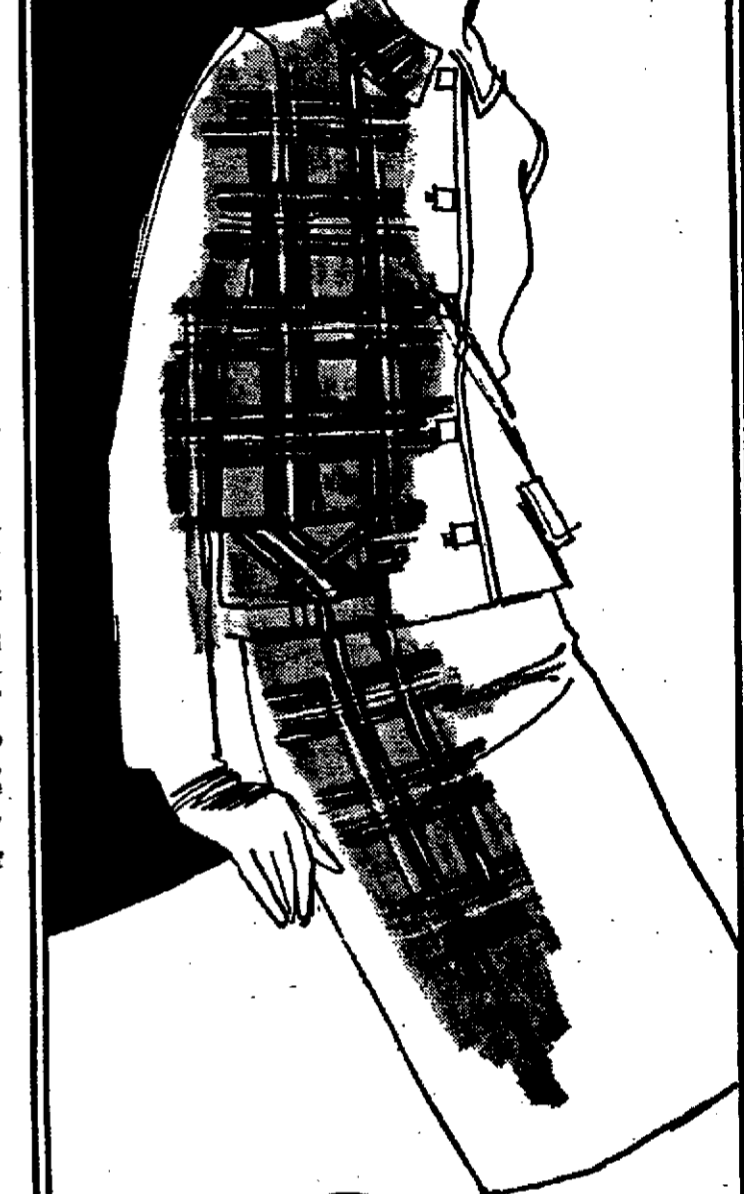

Following a wedding trip to Canada and Gaspi Peninsula, the new Mr. and Mrs. Lane will reside in Niagara Falls, N. Y.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. F. (Matty) Kronenwetter of 118 Evers Avenue. She is a graduate of Central High School, Edinboro State College with a B.S. degree in art education and is presently attending Buffalo State College to obtain her M.S. degree in Art Education. She is an art teacher in the elementary school district in Niagara Falls.

The groom is the son of Stanley Lane of 78-87th Street, Niagara Falls. He is a graduate of LaSalle High School and the Erie County Technical Institute at Buffalo University. He is presently employed as a welder at Harrison Radiator in Lockport, N. Y.

Relatives and friends were in attendance from Toronto, Smithville, Burlington and Willard, Canada; Grand Island, Buffalo and Niagara Falls, N. Y.; New Castle, Delaware; Emporium, North Warren, Kersey, Sheffield, Foxburg, Spartansburg, Clarendon, Daguschahonda and Oil City.

Ann Landers

Answers Your Problems

DEAR ANN LANDERS: We are an average family. By "average" I mean my husband and I are at the mercy of three lazy, uncooperative, smart-mouth kids.

Our daughters (ages 13 and 15) keep us broke. The boy, aged 11, keeps us exhausted. My husband and I don't want to break their spirit or spoil their fun by being too demanding. I'm afraid, however, that we have been too lenient and now we can't get our kids to do anything that vaguely resembles work — either in or out of school.

Last week the kids suggested a "family jury," with each member of the family having one vote. Of course my husband and I always lose because the kids vote as a bloc. Can you help us teach these kids to be responsible citizens? — OUTVOTED

DEAR OUT: The majority rule is excellent for government, but it doesn't work well in mental institutions, prisons or families with two or more children.

Adolescents not only need discipline but they want it. When children call the signals and run the family they get the impression their parents are imbeciles. Kids who do as they please are not happy — they are confused. The best way to keep your children's feet on the ground is to put some responsibility on their shoulders.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: The letter you printed from "Sadder But Wiser" compelled me to write this letter. She was the mousy little housewife who felt guilty about having an affair. I'm a high school student who knows of a similar affair — my

Three Hundred Kinzuans Meet With Former Neighbors

By Mrs. Marshall Stanton
Three hundred former residents of Kinzua traveled from many towns in Ohio, New York, Virginia and Pennsylvania to attend the sixth annual Kinzua reunion held on Sunday, August 4. They ranged in age from 8 months-old Michael Blankenship, son of Mr. and Mrs. Garley Blankenship, Tionesta, Pa., to the young age of 92, that being Mr. Hayes Springer of Arcade, New York. Mr. Springer has attended all the reunions and is looking forward to the next one. There were three generations of many families in attendance.

The afternoon was spent in reminiscing over old times, remembering the good things that happened while living in the beautiful valley and also the sad and tragic things such as the fire that leveled a block of the business section in the 1930's. Remembering how hard many worked to stage the square dances and yearly clambakes to earn money to purchase the firetruck and erect a building to house it so that the town had the latest fire equipment.

Also the pie socials, suppers and come as you are breakfasts and teas sponsored by the church organizations and American Legion Auxiliary.

mother's. Mom always decides to see a very late movie "alone" when Dad is out of town. Once I asked how the movie was and she got so rattled I felt sorry for her. Recently I came home unexpectedly. (I had planned to spend the night at a girl friend's house and changed my mind.) I heard the back door slam as I came in and I smelled pipe tobacco all over the place.

This afternoon I needed 50 cents and Mom wasn't home. I looked in Mom's coat pockets for change. To my horror I discovered a key to a local hotel.

Do I owe it to my dad to tell him? If I don't tell and they get a divorce I will always feel as though I could have helped save their marriage if I had spoken out. — J.K.L.

DEAR J.K.L.: Don't say a word. To anyone. While you may believe the evidence is conclusive, you could be wrong. And if you ARE wrong you would be responsible for stirring up a hideous mess.

Too many couples go from matrimony to acrimony. Don't let your marriage flop before it gets started. Send for Ann Landers' booklet, "Marriage — What To Expect." Send your request to Ann Landers in care of your newspaper enclosing 50 cents in coin and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper, enclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

PLAID PERFECT — Cotton corduroy in a bold block plaid interprets the fall suit with the "little jacket." Made from McCall Pattern 9177, it features a five section skirt with inverted pleats. Wamsutta's pinwale corduroy in olive green, scarlet, and beige is the fabric.

Four Varieties

VEGETARIAN BEANS — Here's the dependable for cooks who prefer to add their own dress-ups. Seasonings are similar to those for pork and beans, but without the meat.

BARBECUE BEANS — You'll find some with meat and others strictly vegetable. Those who prefer a smoky flavor can have their favorite too.

MEXICAN-STYLE BEANS — With their chili-like flavor they make a timesaving starter for many casserole or supper dishes to which you add meat.

KIDNEY BEANS — Look for two styles: One with pork and tomatoes; the other, a spicy sauce without tomatoes.

Hints From Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

How do you clean the vent in the ceiling of a travel trailer? That's the little window on top with the screen and glass cover that opens to let the air out.

Henry

Henry, believe it or not — and my name is not Ripley — I do have the answer.

DON'T touch it with any liquid or solvent.

Take a dry, old terrycloth washrag and gently wipe in one direction ONLY. Be sure and hold a newspaper beneath it. All of the lint and dust that has adhered to the screen will roll off like bullets.

After you get nearly all of it off, then rub the screen in the other direction.

And you know what else I found out? When it catches leaves on top of the screen, open the vent real wide and blow hard, those leaves will fly out.

This saves you from climbing on top of the trailer to clean out that trap.

Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

Plastic sandwich bags are wonderful to keep kids and husbands clean while eating drippy sandwiches like hamburgers.

I just serve the sandwiches tucked halfway into a bag and all the "drippings" fall back into the bag.

There's No Redoing This Hairdo

Are you disturbed about your present hairdo? These suggestions from Family Circle's current issue may be just what you need:

First, a good haircut. Hair that is cut for a particular line or style will hold its shape far better than hair that "just grew." Blunt-cut, the ends fall all to one length and give shape and style even when hair is unmet.

A permanent gives body and hold to the hair. Even if the permanent is only in the ends, this is where you need strong hold. Don't think that even a trend to straight hair means permanents are out. Well-done, you never see the permanent, but the hold is there.

Wind the hair carefully in the direction of the style. Don't expect anything but very short hair to go up — and stay up — without teasing, lacquer, and pinning. Gravity pulls hair down, and a simple cap style will hold better in medium-short to medium-long hair.

Set short hair at back and sides in pin curls for firmness. Be sure you dry the hair thoroughly before you remove the rollers.

If you need a little lift at the forehead or extra hold at the temples, back-comb the hair close to the scalp in these areas.

Before placing the style with brush or fingers, brush the hair well to mesh it into the lines of the hairstyle.

Spray lightly from a distance of eight to 12 inches so as not to wet the hair but to give breeze protection.

The bidding:
South West North East
1 ♠ 1 ♠ Pass Pass
3 NT Pass Pass Pass

A potential nine trick swing hinged on West's selection of an opening lead against South's three no trump contract.

The first round of bidding requires no comment, however, South was confronted with an interesting problem when West's one spade overcall was passed back to him. Inasmuch as North was unable to take action, it appeared unlikely that the partnership could score a game in diamonds which would require the winning of 11 tricks.

On the other hand, South observed that there was a good chance to scramble home with nine tricks at no trump, provided that West led a spade. South accordingly jumped to three no trump which became the final contract.

West gave careful consideration to his opening shot. If he led the queen of spades to dislodge the king, he would probably establish four tricks for himself in that suit. However, West lacked a quick card of reentry and he feared that the unit of time surrendered to the declarer, by giving the latter a trick at the outset, might deal the defense a fatal blow.

West decided to lead from his sequence in hearts in the hope of finding his partner with something in that suit. The king of hearts was opened and East signaled encouragement with the nine. When the king held, West continued with the queen on which South dropped the ten. A third round of hearts enabled East to mop up the suit, and now a spade shift thru declarer's king turned the deal into a rout.

The defense scored four heart tricks and five spades for a net profit of 250 points. If West had led a spade originally, South would have taken 13 tricks.

Your Horoscope

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is, according to the stars.

ARIES (March 21 to April 20)—Things will run smoothly in some areas, roughly in others. In all, however, maintain serenity of disposition and manner. Rewards for your efforts promised soon.

TAURUS (April 21 to May 21)—Don't try to cover too much territory at once but, with well-planned procedure, aim for top goals. Going off on tangents will slow up your progress.

GEMINI (May 22 to June 21)—Being faithful to a trust brings its own reward. So, whether or not your efforts seem to be appreciated, keep right on — with integrity and consistent endeavor. Your merits are piling up.

CANCER (June 22 to July 23)—Some interferences with your plans indicated, but take it in stride. What you do with your own talents is of first importance. Use them well, then note where other puzzle pieces fit.

LEO (July 24 to August 23)—Putting "heart and soul" into your activities is fine— IF you don't overtax your self. Set a reasonable pace and follow it calmly, confidently. You will achieve even more than you can if hurried or anxious.

VIRGO (August 24 to September 23)—Planetary influences point to new interests. Make sure you are ready for them — but without neglecting current obligations. Don't let moods cause misunderstandings.

LIBRA (September 24 to October 23)—One of those days which you can make — or break — for yourself. You can be vital and strong or surrender to lethargy and indifference. It's up to you!

How to Keep Well

(c) 1968: By The Chicago Tribune

ADRENAL INSUFFICIENCY

R. W. writes: "What are the symptoms, treatment, and the overall outlook in Addison's disease?"

Addisonism stems from an insufficiency of the adrenal glands. These tissues are indispensable to life because they supply the hormones that keep the mind alert and help the body combat disease and other forms of stress. In addition, they control the distribution and excretion of salt and water, and play an important role in maintaining normal blood pressure.

The adrenals are flattened, caplike structures that cover the upper part of each kidney. Slightly larger than half a dried apricot, the glands weigh approximately 1.5 of an ounce. In Addison's disease the central part (cortex) is destroyed by tuberculosis or by stress situations such as severe illness earlier in life.

Weakness and easy fatigability begin gradually. The victim looks and acts tired and becomes nervous, irritable, and depressed. Increased pigmentation may give the skin a dingy or dirty appearance. The epidermis is darkened over pressure points such as knees, elbows, and knuckles. In time, there is weight loss, apathy, dehydration, low blood pressure, dizziness, and gastrointestinal distress.

Even a mild respiratory or intestinal infection must be avoided because it may trigger a crisis. This is the tragedy of the disease, because the body is defenseless and sudden death may occur. Today, most victims can expect to live normal lives with hormone replacement and additional salt. The daily administration of cortisone or prednisone restores appetite, body weight, and SCORPIO (October 24 to November 22)—You can run an efficient, flexible program if you are your innately logical self, and will keep your mind free of irrelevant ideas. Unusual ideas or methods, properly presented, could win you new laurels now.

SAGITTARIUS (November 23 to December 21)—Increasing advantages indicated, but some may be hidden, so you will have to ferret them out for yourself. A good day for research and expansion.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20)—Many skirmishes can be lost, but the final battle gloriously won. You may face trials and opposition now, but work toward that wonderful conclusion!

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19)—A splendid period for capitalizing on your fine abilities, displaying your versatility. Just one admonition: Avoid impulsive action; it could lead to needless errors.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20)—Originality is not absolutely necessary to the successful conclusion of an undertaking. You may do better by revitalizing an old method, up-dating past procedures.

Every individual with this condition should carry a card with his name, address, and disease plus the name, telephone number, and address of his doctor and the nearest relative.

SUMMER HAY FEVER

M. G. writes: For several years, my daughter has had hay fever every August. Now she has also developed June hay fever. Can anything be done now to ward off symptoms in August?

REPLY
Desensitization to pollen offers the only hope of controlling her allergy to this irritant. The antihistamines and steroids may give temporary relief, but these products will not eliminate the basic cause. Moving to a different climate may help, if a pollen-free community can be found.

NOISY INTESTINE

N. P. writes: I am troubled with rumblings and gas and my physician said my gut is tender. Could these symptoms go into cancer?

REPLY
The intestines are noisy, but not tender, if rumblings caused cancer, this disease would be more prevalent than the common cold.

TODAY'S HEALTH HINT — A balanced diet is needed in the hot, humid weather of summer.

Opera Association Features Mozart's 'Don Giovanni'

Chautauqua, New York — The Chautauqua Opera Association, whose performances this summer here have been drawing standing room only audiences, presents Mozart's musical masterpiece, "Don Giovanni," with a stellar cast today, August 9 and Monday, August 12.

"Don Giovanni," the operatic version of "Don Juan" expresses the eternal idea that man will risk anything, even damnation, rather than give up his quest for women and worldly pleasures. Mozart's beautiful music will be sung by Claude Corbell (COR-BAY) as Don Giovanni and Maria Dornya as Donna Anna, one of the three women he pursues. Donna Anna's vengeance-seeking husband, Don Ottavio, will be portrayed by Perry Price. Don Giovanni's only wife, Donna Elvira, will be sung by Heather Thomson. Paul Pliska as Leporello and Lynne Ellsler as the peasant girl, Zerlina, complete the major roles.

Claude Corbell is known throughout Canada as a singing star of television, opera and the concert stage. He has made appearances at Montreal's famous civic theater, Place des Arts, with the Canadian and Quebec City Opera companies in productions such as "La Boheme," "Costi Fan Tutte," "Traviata" and "Manon." In May 1968 he played Raimondo in "Lucia di Lammermoor" at the Place des Arts. Claude Corbell is a featured singer coast-to-coast twice weekly on CBC radio and has been seen in several operas over Channel two in Montreal. As a concert artist he has toured throughout Canada for the Canadian Council of Arts and was one of Expo 67's concert soloists.

Maria Dornya is a specialist in the music of Richard Strauss and Richard Wagner, singing such diverse roles as Octavian in "Der Rosenkavalier" and Isolde in "Tristan and Isolde." Though an American soprano, she is a member of the Dusseldorf, Zurich and Munich Opera houses and has been widely recognized for her performances. Most recently she was invited to sing the title role in Strauss "Die Frau Ohne Schatten" in its New York premiere at Lincoln Center. Miss Dornya has appeared in the United States with the NBC television opera, the Washington Opera Society, the Philadelphia Lyric Opera Company and in concert with the symphony orchestras of Detroit, Toledo, Miami and Kansas City.

"Don Giovanni" will be presented in Norton Memorial Hall at 8:30 p. m. Tickets for the opera may be obtained by phoning the Chautauqua Box Office, (357-3005) or at the Jamestown Chamber of Commerce or the Charles Tranter Public Relations Office in Warren.

Newspaper route management: Headstart for your boy

YOUR HOPES for your boy's success in life can start taking shape today. Right now.

With a business of his own.

A business in which he gains a sense of responsibility and dependability, learns to sell and to get along with people, learns the basics of business and the value of money (like any well-run business, his will show a good profit).

The business we are suggesting is a newspaper route.

Applies his school lessons

Newspaper route management is the best way we know of in which a boy can apply in a practical way the lessons he learns in the classroom. This helps him to be a better student. It also gives him a headstart in the business of life.

A successful man we know told us the other day: "Surprising as it may seem, the elementary training I got as a newspaper carrierboy has helped me more than any other single thing I can name in understanding the conduct of business."

Learns basics of business

And he added, "This is why if my boy is able to qualify I want him to have a newspaper route."

The people in our circulation department will be pleased to tell you how your son can qualify—and they will help him get a route of his own in your neighborhood. They also will give him a big start toward success in life. Ask today—

Wedding Vows Exchanged In St. John's of Tidioute

MRS. WILLIAM HUGH McGRAW

(Kotod Studio)

AN EDITORIAL

Where Were Our Tidioute Hosts?

(Editor's Note: A story on the Historical Society's visit to the Tidioute area will appear in the near future.)

By Lois McCloskey

It was a difficult and unhappy task to apologize to our 65 guests from Warren and vicinity who traveled to Tidioute last Sunday to visit the places of historical interest in this 162-year old town, when not one local person showed up to offer a greeting or to assist with the tour.

We well know it was a hot and humid day, but we were happy to have been asked by Dr. William Cashman to conduct the tour for the Warren County Historical Society. After three hours of talking without the aid of a bull horn or loud speaker we were voiceless on Monday, but it was an enthusiastic group of people and well worth the effort.

But where was our mayor with the keys to the CITY, or the president of our Area Chamber of Commerce, and for that matter, where were the Tidioute residents who belong to the historical society? We didn't think it necessary to personally ask any of these persons to be present, because they represent the town.

Our thanks go to the very few who did assist in any way. To the Gib Enick family and especially to Tom Enick who scoured his attic for early pictures; to Raymond Peterson who loaned his picture of a Tidioute race track here just after the Civil War; and to Harry Glenn who loaned three old pictures taken by the late John Biner.

James and Bernard King gave us their two windows in King Lumber and Supply where we put these exhibits; and Goodwin's Department store placed an old ledger of 1881 with entries of various types of merchandise. A note added, said purchases were often paid for with eggs, butter or a dead horse. Mr. Goodwin, present owner, had the ledger in the basement of the store.

The historical society had asked for a walking tour of our main street, but the more we looked at it, the surer we were that our residential sections more worthy of display.

Starting at Tidioute Creek bridge and progressing west, there is nothing left of the old town until we reach the C&M Market which has had a complete facelift and is a modern market.

The old Jennings store stands there with its windows boarded up but deserving of either being modernized or razed. Homer Miller's Cafe has a new face and is modern in all details inside. It was first McCalls furniture store with funeral parlors upstairs.

From here on past Dunn's old store, and Charlie Lindquist's cigar and candy store, we could point to pride only to Garwood Lodge's show windows of fine furniture and appliances.

The old Mercantile House, then Bucklin's hotel, the Caldin House and more recently Anderson's Hotel, has been improved in front but a vacant lot and the sides and back of the building are not show places.

The Allen's added a fine new coat of red paint to their insurance and camera shop just last Saturday. Mr. Pickersgill has had his hardware store painted this summer; the King Lumber and Supply is in fine condition and had its windows freshly washed. Lodge's Gift Shop makes an attractive corner with its fine window displays as does Goodwins Store.

Next he has an empty store room and the little former office building which was once Uller's Jewelry store needs its face washed and an occupant.

Don Cullen runs a fine coffee shop and drug store and Ed Shanley's Red and White Market is modern and attractive as is Druggan's Hardware store. Sam Nichol's old shop and the Health clinic are deplorable with the soap from last Halloween still on the windows. Now just what could we say about the old Grandin building? Words fail us.

Tidioute High Class Of 1933 Has Reunion

Thirty five years have passed since the Class of 1933 received its diplomas and went out into the world of work and responsibility. There were 27 members in this class who have been holding a reunion each fifth year since that time.

Saturday, August 10th marked the sixth time these classmates have met for a banquet to reminisce the days of yore, to present children's pictures and now to proudly show those of the grandchildren.

The banquet was held at 6:30 p.m. on Saturday at H's Inn with 13 members who were graduates, two whose family moved shortly before graduation, and husbands or wives of the graduates.

Arrangements for the banquet were in charge of Mrs. Lenore Wolcott McIntyre. Following dinner, the group adjourned to the home of Mr. and Mrs. John (Catherine) Christy. Classmates included Catherine McCloskey Christy, Esther Aldin Yeager, Genevieve Kowalski Forrester, Bernadine Spencer Snyder, Independence, Kansas; Julia Grace Donaldson Oiler of Corry, Dean Nicholson, Ethel Lewis Nicholson, Hannah Mowris Rudolph of Warren, Beatrice McGraw Vincent, Ellen Peterson McGraw, Clyde Peterson of Erie, Sidney Anderson, Washington, D.C.; Lenore Wolcott McIntyre.

Also attending were Muri Carnahan, West Seneca, N.Y., and his twin brother Earl Carnahan of Springville, N.Y., who were unable to graduate with the class because their family moved to Erie before the school closed.

Coming the farthest distance were Mr. and Mrs. Claude (Bernadine) Snyder, Tying for the most grandchildren were the Earl Carnahans and Mrs. Lenore Wolcott McIntyre each with 13 grandchildren. The Carnahans also took honors with the most children (six).

The only death in the class has been that of Helen Kernick, Mrs. Larry Stull in 1956.

SOME PINCH

BUENA PARK, Calif. (AP) — A 1.3-million-pound "pinch" of salt might seem to be a contradiction in terms, but that's how much salt is used each year to season the wide variety of cookies and crackers produced at National Biscuit Co.'s big new bakery here.

The huge bakery, which has three 300-foot-long ovens, produces some 65 million pounds of cookies and crackers annually. In addition to that huge pinch of salt, it uses 47 million pounds of flour and 8 million pounds of sugar a year.

Svetlana Reveals Burning Passport; Plans Never to Return to Russia

NEW YORK — Svetlana Alliluyeva, Stalin's only daughter, has written a friend that last summer she burned her Soviet passport "so that no one could ever get the idea that I might return to Moscow." She also indicated that she intends to become an American citizen.

In an intense, personal and sometimes caustically witty letter, Svetlana Alliluyeva vowed she could never return to the Soviet Union, "a land of uninterrupted pain and trauma," for which she feels none of the nostalgia Russian emigrants so often develop for their homeland.

Writing with affection about friendships she has formed with American families in Princeton, N.J., where she has lived for almost a year, she said "my life is now really free, full of interest and significance for me."

The 15,000-word letter, dated May 11, was sent to an unidentified elderly Russian woman living in Paris with a request that it be published as a reply to an article in the French newspaper L'Aurore. The article, written by Andre Vige, depicted Stalin's daughter as lonely, longing to return to her children in Moscow, unable to adapt to American life and heavily guarded by police.

"I should be resigned by now to being lied about," Mrs. Alliluyeva wrote. "But somehow I cannot get reconciled to the idea that from now on and forever there will be no escape for me from lies. As a result I continue to react strongly to articles of this kind."

The letter was first published in Russian in "La Pensee Russe" (Russian Thought), a small exile journal in Paris and more recently by La Croix, a French Catholic daily. It also appeared in Russian in the July 16 issue of Novos Russkoe Slovo, a Russian-language daily in New York.

Reached at her home in Princeton, Mrs. Alliluyeva made available an approved English translation of the letter to the New York Times. The translation was written by Paul Chaudhary, a member of the Russian royal family who emigrated to the United States and wrote several books.

Dismissing a published report that she was fighting to overcome her solitude in a Princeton country club, Mrs. Alliluyeva wrote: "I do not play golf, as for tennis I have long forgotten it. But I do plan to buy an automobile and I do not consider this as being particularly 'bourgeois.'"

In the letter, Mrs. Alliluyeva acknowledged she missed her children, Lousip, 20, and Katya, 16, but she made it clear that she would never return to the Soviet Union under its present Communist leadership.

"I myself think of Russia as a land of uninterrupted pain and trauma," she wrote. Because of this, when I now see Moscow streets in my dreams I wake up in horror. It's as if one were dreaming of a prison from which one had escaped, and then suddenly... that is how I feel. And I shall never return to that prison! And my wish for all those I love and remember is that they too should manage to get out of it some day!"

To remove any doubt about her decision never to return to Russia, Mrs. Alliluyeva said that last summer "I threw my Soviet passport in the fire. At the same time, she wrote that she would be "happy to become a citizen of the United States" although she felt that with her cosmopolitan nature she could feel comfortable in any country in the East and the West, outside the Communist orbit.

In a telephone conversation, Mrs. Alliluyeva confirmed that she intended to take out American naturalization papers as soon as she completed her five year residence requirement.

"I have already taken the first step when I established permanent residence in the United States a year ago," she said.

Bottle-Throwing Incidents Keep Erie Police Busy

ERIE, Pa. (AP) — Rock and bottle-throwing incidents on the Lower West Side kept police on the hop Wednesday night and early Thursday.

Patrolmen also had to break up several crowds that gathered, but no arrests were made. A car parked behind a house caught fire, and officers blamed it on arson.

But they said they were unable to determine what caused a fire that destroyed a garage and car in the same neighborhood.

GANGES BLAZES

MONGHYR, India (AP) — The holiest of the holy rivers for India's Hindus, the Ganges, was ablaze for miles.

The fire was believed caused by a oil refinery irresponsibly discharging refuse oil into the river.

ABA Head Calls For Deeper Involvement

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — William T. Gossett, 62, of Detroit, formally assumed the presidency of the American Bar Association Thursday, with a plea for "deeper lawyer involvement in the problems of our time."

Gossett, who succeeded Earl F. Morris of Columbus, Ohio, at the close of the week-long 91st annual convention of the world's largest organization of attorneys said "there has never been a greater concern for the preservation of society — and many think there will be tranquility with stronger, tougher law enforcement."

But Gossett told a joint wind-up meeting of the policy-making House of Delegates and Assembly "we need more than law enforcement — we need to dig into the root causes of discontent and violence and poverty."

Gossett is the 92nd president of the 132,000-member ABA. His father-in-law, the late Chief Justice Charles Evan Hughes became the ABA's 47th president in 1924, also at a meeting in Philadelphia.

The president-elect of the association is Bernard G. Segal, a Philadelphian.

Five new delegates were elected to the House for three-year terms. They are: Churchill Rodgers, New York City; William A. Sutherland, Atlanta, Ga.; Theodore Voorhees, Philadelphia; Calvin H. Udall, Phoenix, Ariz., and Ashley Sellers, Washington, D.C.

The ABA also announced a 10-year project of research in history and drama aimed at recreating — for use in 1976 — the accomplishments of American lawyers in the past 300 years. Arthur E. Sutherland, professor of law at Harvard University, was named to write the history.

Emmet Lavery, New York playwright and lawyer, was named by the ABA's Centennial Commission, to produce a series of national television programs to depict "the enduring impact of the great in the law."
